BLM blasts Air Force range plan

By William Brock
Times-News writer

BOISE – "Incorrect, misleading and inadequate" is how the state director of the Bureau of Land Management describes part of an environmental study for a bomb training range in southern Owyhee County.

Further, the bombing range would disrupt the area's solitude and diminish wilderness consideration by Congress, wrote Delmar Vail in a formal BLM comment on the bombing range's draft environmental impact statement.

Vail's comments are significant because the BLM oversees most of the land sought by the U.S. Air Force and the Idaho Air National Guard for training overflights.

Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus is pushing for the state to obtain the land in a trade with the BLM, then lease it to the Air Force to safeguard the future of the Mountain Home Air Force Base. In its current configuration, the Idaho Training Range proposal calls for 25,350 acres, split into two separate impact areas. Some 7,043 acres of the land are privately owned and would be purchased outright by the Air Force.

The crux of Vail's criticism is that the bomb training range would reduce solitude over areas where solitude is an outstanding characteristic. Specifically, he cited areas under consideration by Congress for wilderness designation, as well sections of the Owyhee River that are eligible for protection under the federal Wild and Scenic River Act.

Allowing the state to obtain the land, then lease it to the Air Force for bomb training would preclude Congress from considering its wild virtues, Vail wrote. He dismissed the document's claim that environmental impacts would be temporary and reclaimable – thus preserving Congress' option to declare it wilderness.

In comments prepared last month, Vail wrote, "it is very difficult to understand how the noise levels (over the two target areas) can go up only two decibels" – even though the average number of jets passing overhead every day would rise from 2.3 to 4.9.

The noise of streaking jets will disrupt humans and wildlife – including antelope, bighorn sheep and upland game birds, he

'Mito' Alonzo leaves 5th District Court in Burley Thursday. He is charged with helping a woman illegally sell drivers licenses.

Former Jerome officer pleads innocent

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY – A former Jerome County undersheriff pleaded innocent Thursday to racketeering and bribery charges.

Fifth District Judge George Granata reduced the bond for Erasmo "Mito" Mendoza Alonzo, 46, to $10,000 from $100,000. Alonzo bonded out of Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center in the afternoon.

Alonzo, who served 14 years as a lawman, is charged with helping a woman illegally sell drivers licenses to 10 people. He faces a maximum of 14 years imprisonment and $25,000 in fines for one count of racketeering.

Alonzo also is charged with bribery; the indictment says he took $50 from a man who bought a driver's license in November 1991. He faces a maximum of five years and $5,000 in fines on that charge, Granata said.

People bought licenses at prices ranging from $100 to $200 each, according to a Jerome County grand jury indict-

Health care reform will assist rural areas

By Patricia Willens
States News Service

30 Congressmen offer their plan – A4

WASHINGTON – Chances are good that almost any health care reform that passes Congress will be good for rural communities.

Despite the disagreements and disputes surrounding reform, people seem to agree there is a serious health care problem in rural America. The White House has estimated 14 million citizens living in rural, officially "underserved" areas, about half of them living in poverty as well.

"It's a mom and apple pie issue" that politicians love to bemoan, said Kim Sibilski, spokesman for the Rural Health Association. The question is whether supportive rhetoric will make a difference when it comes down to the gritty details of a final health care package.

Congress is currently examining a handful of proposals, ranging from a single-payer Canadian style plan to a Republican version emphasizing changes in the tax code and government vouchers. President Clinton's plan falls somewhere in between. Any decisive vote is not expected before the summer.

In the meantime, rural communities throughout the West struggle with a dearth of doctors, remote facilities, and less access to federal-state money, according to Sibilski and state officials.

The greatest effort in all the health-care plans aims at placing doctors in rural areas. Mostly, they establish tax incentives, loan repayment plans and bonuses to doctors and nurse practitioners who service underserved areas – rural or urban.

"One of the biggest problems is getting a sustained supply of primary care physicians – recruitment and retention," said Tim Henderson who researches states' health policies at George Washington University.

"In the frontier areas they haven't been able to attract physicians, physician assistants, and nurse practitioners," Henderson said. And the ones that do practice in these areas don't stay long. "It's so isolated they get burned out," he said.

The University of Washington medical school tackles this problem with a program for Idaho, Montana and Alaska medical students. The school admits about 50 students from these three states every year and offers classes, internships and training tailored for future rural physicians.

The students return to their home state for parts of their medical school education and can participate in a summer internship that gives them early clinical exposure to a rural practice.

Warning shot at Japan meant to avoid target

By Peter Behr
The Washington Post

Analysis

WASHINGTON — The executive order President Clinton signed Thursday to reinstate a controversial provision of U.S. trade law known as "Super 301" was clearly meant as a warning shot toward Japan.

But in keeping with the zen-like quality of the quarrel, it was carefully aimed to avoid hitting its target.

By reviving what many consider to be America's ultimate weapon in trade disputes, administration officials said they hope to:

• Bring Japanese Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa back to the bargaining table to revive talks that broke off last month over how to reduce Japan's global trade surplus.

• Persuade Japan's critics in Congress and the U.S. business community that the administration is not losing its nerve in the gradually escalating test of wills with Japan.

• Reassure European and Asian governments and American free-trade advocates that the United States has not turned into a shoot-from-the-hip trade vigilante, settling scores on its own terms.

In broadcasting this doubled-edged message of threat and reassurance, the administration is walking a fine line between its conflicting goals.

Super 301, which lapsed four years ago, creates a timetable for identifying the foreign trade practices that do the most damage to U.S. exporters.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor said Thursday those decisions could come anytime after March 31, when his office releases its annual assessment of trade barriers. But, he added, the target list is not expected to be issued until Sept. 30 — the full, six-month period provided by Clinton's order.

That is all that Super 301 does. Once countries and barriers have been targeted, the administration must use other trade provisions to take the steps that could lead to the imposition of prohibitively high tariffs on goods from the offending country.

Give Prozac a try, psychologist advises reporter

By Ayiva L. Brandt
The Associated Press

WENATCHEE, Wash. — Psychologist Jim Goodwin has been called the Pied Piper of Prozac, accused of urging the antidepressant drug too forcefully on patients and without adequate evaluation of their condition.

It took him 15 minutes to suggest I try Prozac to relieve what he called a "mild form of depression."

"It's a genetic problem; most Jews have it," said Goodwin, who also is Jewish. "If you're interested, I'd be happy to see you for therapy."

Goodwin has found himself the focus of a nationwide stir, highlighted in television and print news magazines, over whether Prozac is being prescribed properly. He estimates he has treated almost 700 people in this central Washington city of 21,000 — and every one of them takes Prozac or another antidepressant. He himself has taken Prozac since 1989.

In June, he faces a hearing before the Washington Licensing Board of Psychology on charges he pressured patients to take Prozac, urged use of Prozac without adequate diagnosis and breached patient confidentiality. The board could revoke Goodwin's license.

In his defense, Goodwin said, "It wasn't that I required (Prozac), but I was rather aggressive with people that they go to their family physician" for a prescription.

"Psychotherapy takes years," he said. "With this medicine, I've actually got it down to about 13 sessions."

I interviewed Goodwin at a Wenatchee restaurant about the charges, which he says are unfounded. Within 15 minutes, Goodwin told me I suffered from mild depression.

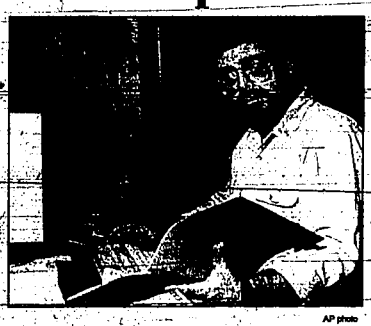

I was taken aback and told him so.

After getting a promotion and starting a new job in a new part of the country, I was feeling pretty good about life. But Goodwin, who received a doctorate in psychology from the University of Denver's School of Professional Psychology, said people with mild depression often don't recognize the symptoms until they get treatment.

Dr. Ronald Fieve, president of the Foundation for Depression and Manic Depression in New York City and a professor at Columbia University, said Prozac is not approved to treat mild depression.

"The only two diagnoses the FDA has approved Prozac for are major depressive disorder and obsessional compulsive disorder," Fieve said.

Fieve, whose book "Prozac" will be published next month, said he spends at least 45 minutes with a patient, then orders a battery of tests, before making a diagnosis.

Weather summary

Thursday was another day of record high temperatures for much of Idaho.

It was warmer than normal day Idaho as well as many other nearby states with many new or tied record high temperatures. One record high was at Pocatello with 65 degrees which surpassed the old mark of 64 degrees set in 1921.

The high pressure and southwest flow aloft responsible for the abnormally warm weather has begun to make way for showery weather already in extreme northern Idaho and Washington state.

Skies were partly cloudy over the Magic Valley and winds were light much of the day.

The only reports of precipitation came from the northern sections of the state, Mullan led the list with .32 inch; other reports included Grangeville a trace, Moscow .25, and Coeur d'Alene .14.

The highest temperature in the state Thursday was 73 degrees at Hagerman, Stanley and Corral reported the lowest at 15 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Thursday, the highest temperature was 92 degrees at Thermal, Calif. Houlton, Maine, reported the lowest temperature at 7 degrees below zero.

East hammered again but mild March prevails elsewhere

The Associated Press

Snow and strong wind brought a wintry blast to much of the East on Thursday, with fair weather elsewhere in the nation.

Heavy snow fell in New England and portions of northern New York and eastern Pennsylvania the day after a storm made its way up the Atlantic Coast. Burdett, N.Y., had 27 inches of snow on the ground Thursday, and Pennsylvania's Lock Haven, Sugar Valley and Lovelton had 24 inches each.

While the East dug out, much of the West and central United States had fair, dry weather.

Temperatures reached into the high 70s across the Plains. Hutchinson, Kan., had a reading of 78 degrees, and the temperature in Billings, Mont., was 67. It reached 61 degrees in Daytona Beach., Fla., and 90 degrees in Thermal, Calif.

Colorado Springs, Colo., broke its record high for the date with a reading of 65. Laramie, Wyo., set a new record high for the date with a temperature of 55 degrees.

The National Weather Service posted gale and flood warnings for Thursday along much of the Atlantic Coast, with pounding surf in New England and the mid-Atlantic states.

The weather service warned of more snow forecast for northeastern Pennsylvania, eastern New York, northwestern Connecticut, and most of Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine. The northern mountains of West Virginia and western North Carolina were also included.

wrote. How, Vail wondered, can the study conclude that no adverse effects on humans will occur when Salmon Creek Reservoir, Cedar Creek Reservoir and the community of Roseworth lie directly beneath the proposed flight paths?

Vail's comments suggested the environmental study was riddled with inaccuracies and internal contradictions.

In one section, the study claims that 2,700 aircraft sorties will be eliminated – while in another section, the study maintains that sorties will increase by 25 percent, Vail wrote.

He repeatedly disputed the Air Force claim that 99.99 percent of its non-exploding bombs would land within the two impact areas.

In addition to being incorrect, misleading and inadequate, the impact statement's analysis of disruption to the area's California bighorn sheep is "highly vulnerable to legal challenges," Vail wrote.

The analysis of effects on upland game birds – particularly sage grouse – is "not very straightforward," Vail said. He maintained that scientific statements were taken out of context – a process which "leads the reader to believe that the impacts are negligible," Vail said.

He added that it's difficult to believe that low (500 to 2,000-foot) flights would be eliminated during nesting seasons.

The study also failed to consider the effects that Idaho Air National Guard helicopters would have on the area, Vail wrote.

Military jets already use much of southern Owyhee County as a "military operating area," Vail noted. But, he added, the study "cannot continue to imply that since aircraft (military) has already been there, that their future presence will create no impact" – even though the number of flights will be increasing.

The environmental study's claims that winter conditions in the Battle Creek and Mud Flat Road areas are often too harsh for wildlife are "not substantiated and may be misleading," Vail wrote.

On the subject of fire danger, Vail maintained that fires will occur and the vegetation will change; opportunistic cheatgrass will probably begin to spread, he maintained.

Vail blasted the study's contention that no firebreaks would be needed for the first few years as "completely backward thinking."

"Firebreaks must be installed before any range operations occur. Prevention first, always," he wrote. "The risks are too high ..."

As for chaff, which pilots would drop to scramble radar tracking, Vail said there is no basis for the study's "no environmental impact" conclusion.

"The best you could say would be: From what few studies have been done, there is no conclusive evidence either positive or negative ..."

A final environmental impact statement is due next month, and a decision on the bombing range is expected in May.

Trade

If Clinton and Hosokawa cannot reach agreement and Japan is targeted as a top-priority trade offender in September, that would trigger another period of review, pressure and consultation that could last another year to 18 months, officials said.

And if the dispute runs its full course, decisions on major parts of the argument would come not from U.S. officials, but from an international panel under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT.

Clinton's decision to reinstate Super 301 was made only after a sharp debate among his advisers. While most favored acting for various reasons, Laura D'Andrea Tyson, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, argued that this was the wrong time and the wrong circumstances to take such a provocative step, administative officials said.

But most of Clinton's team felt the Super 301 signal had to be sent, officials said.

Since Clinton called for reinstating Super 301 in the 1992 presidential campaign, a delay would have undermined his credibility with Congress, where the measures has a strong following, led by Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., chairman of the Senate Finance subcommittee on international trade.

The next step is up to Japan, according to Kantor. Hosokawa has promised to prepare a menu of actions Japan would take to remove regulations that stifle competition, something that would both respond to U.S. complaints and be in Japan's economic interests, as well.

ful," said Washington professor Roger Rosenblatt. "It is possible to create environments that are attractive enough to physicians," especially if they are from the area they are serving, he said.

Still, Idaho has the lowest per capita number of doctors in the country, with about 1,447 licensed physicians, according to the state's Department of Health and Welfare. Portions of 32 counties, out of the state's 44, have a federally declared shortage of health professionals.

Nez Perce County had the highest doctor-patient ratio – 275 doctors per 100,000 people – whereas there were no full-time physicians in Camas, Clark or Owyhee Counties.

Alleviating this problem is the mission of the federal Health Service Corps, created about 25 years ago, to place young doctors in underserved areas.

The Corps used to have a much greater presence, particularly in the West, Henderson said, "but when Reagan became president, he made some pretty heavy cuts."

The Clinton plan proposes an investment between $1.2 to $1.7 billion for the Corps and other primary care, community-based facilities. The single payer plan proposes up to $2.7 billion for the same programs while the other proposals have not yet specified a dollar amount.

Another major aspect of any health care reform would focus on Medicaid and Medicare reimbursements – two federal programs that have taken an increasingly large bite out of state budgets, hitting rural and poor communities especially hard.

Most reforms propose revised reimbursement policies to even out the amounts that go to rural and urban caregivers and streamline the entire bureaucracy. Now, a service in an urban setting has a higher price tag than the same service in the country-side.

ment handed up last week. The racketeering occurred between September 1990 and September 1991, the indictment said.

Any other details of the indictment are closed to the public, said special prosecutor Kevin Cassidy, deputy Idaho attorney general.

Jerome deputies drove Alonzo back from San Jose, Calif., for his arraignment. Alonzo had been living there on and off since leaving the Jerome County Sheriff's Department, his defense attorney, Keith Roark, said.

Alonzo left his position in a cloud of controversy in June 1992. In August 1992, Alonzo filed a $1 million tort claim against Jerome County, saying he had been wrongfully fired. The claim was settled for $20,000.

Alonzo had been recently working in Santa Clara County, Calif., where his wife, who is enlisted in the U.S. Air Force, was assigned, Roark said. He worked briefly as a security guard and with the Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms before being jailed on the Jerome County charges, Roark said.

During the period covered by the indictment, Alonzo had a courthouse office next to the Jerome County driver's license office.

Lawmakers pitch bipartisan health-care reform

Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., testifies about health-care reform Thursday. Cooper was among 30 representatives – 15 from each party – who fears an impasse in reforming health care.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty lawmakers proposed a bipartisan, bare-bones health reform bill Thursday to help workers with serious illnesses keep their insurance and to help Congress avoid a stalemate.

The 15 Democrats and 15 Republicans said they had plucked the common elements from the Clinton proposal and rival plans and repackaged them in a consensus bill that would not add a single dollar to federal spending or the deficit.

It would come nowhere near President Clinton's goal of guaranteed coverage for all Americans.

"I don't know why we have to do it all at once," said Rep. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga.

His coauthor, Rep. Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla., said no more than a third of the Congress had backed any single reform bill, but 297 House members separately had backed the proposals grafted onto the consensus plan.

"The bottom line is ... to (get) a bill through the Congress this year," Bilirakis said. "The way it is right now, everything is so splintered, we're just going to look like fools up here."

"Let's get started with the foundation. We can build the house later on," said Rep. William H. Zeliff Jr., R-N.H., a cosponsor.

Thirty-three Republican senators, meanwhile, left on an overnight retreat to Annapolis, Md., to hash out their differences on health reform behind closed doors. House GOP leaders and the governors of South Carolina, New Hampshire and Utah were joining them.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said it wasn't a bill-drafting session and Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island, the retreat organizer, said, "I can tell you now, having taken a few soundings, that there won't be unanimity."

Dole said, "We'll get closer than the Democrats," and added, "I think we can do better" than the stripped-down reform plan that Rowland and Bilirakis have advanced.

Rowland, a former family physician, said their bill had "not one new dollar" in it. He called it a "cut-and-paste" job.

It would limit pre-existing condition exclusions in employer health benefit plans and allow workers to keep coverage when they changed jobs. But it would not outlaw pre-existing condition clauses in policies sold to individuals.

The bill would discourage malpractice lawsuits, require patients with a grievance to try alternative dispute resolution first, strictly limit lawyers' fees and put a $250,000 cap on awards for pain and suffering. It would also cut red tape and encourage the spread of community health centers to help the uninsured.

It would allow the self-employed to deduct 100 percent of their health insurance expenses from their taxes instead of 25 percent.

That would cost $8 billion over three years, but in a bookkeeping move the bill would pay for that by forcing the Postal Service, the Tennessee Valley Authority and other agencies to put aside more money for future retiree health benefits.

That would raise $11 billion over five years — money the government could spend immediately, but it could require a two-cent increase in stamp prices. "We're not happy with that," said Bilirakis, indicating the sponsors would look for other ways to raise the money.

Rowland and Bilirakis got 100 colleagues to sign a letter to President Clinton in October urging him to abandon his all-or-nothing approach to health reform and try some interim steps first.

Clinton, on CBS-TV, said he will keep fighting for universal coverage "as long as I'm president."

He indicated flexibility on his troubled proposal for mandatory insurance purchasing alliances, but said, "You're going to have to have some way to protect the little guy."

Rowland said it would be "tragic" for Clinton to veto the consensus bill, if it is approved by Congress, and expressed doubt the president would make good on his threat.

"The more the president sees he's losing some steam, the more they may be amenable to working things out," Bilirakis said.

Rowland, Bilirakis and four cosponsors sit on the House Energy and Commerce Committee, which announced Wednesday it would bypass its divided health subcommittee and try to draft a bill in the full committee in April.

House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., at a news conference with Dole and Chafee, said the Democrats are "within one vote of losing control of (that) committee."

Chicago Tribune

WASHINGTON — Suddenly, President Clinton's proposal for overhauling the nation's health-care system is in serious peril.

The steady pounding that his comprehensive plan has received from special-interest groups and congressional opponents has escalated in recent days and is substantially diminishing the chances that all Americans will obtain guaranteed health-care coverage this year.

Although the president and his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, have campaigned extensively for the measure, the White House's health-care team has proven decidedly ineffective in persuading Congress to support the main principles of the plan.

And perhaps more important, new polls indicate the plan is losing support with the public.

Some who have watched the process closely fear there could be no health-care legislation at all, a worst-case scenario that could occur if liberals and conservatives decline to yield their hard-line positions.

"I think the whole thing could crash," said one senior congressional staff member who deals with health care. "I think we are back to Square One. Either we will have incremental change or nothing."

Conservatives could block any broad-based initiative with universal coverage, and liberals, especially those who support a government-administered, single-payer plan, could kill a minimalist proposal sponsored by conservatives.

At a meeting with Clinton last week, supporters of the single-payer plan said they could not vote for a health-care bill that did not provide for universal coverage. With 92 votes in the House, this group will likely have a strong say in any plan.

"I always thought there was a possibility of gridlock," said Linda Lipsen, chief lobbyist for Consumers Union, who said strong support for universal coverage in Congress is being frustrated by opposition from the health-care industry and the medical establishment.

Others said it's too soon to predict the outcome of a long, deliberative process apt to be full of political ups and downs.

Budget Director Leon Panetta said that passing a health-care bill will be a confusing, step-by-step process. The president's broad ideas, now often maligned, may be considered anew and reflected in legislation when it reaches a House-Senate conference, he said.

While Clinton has undertaken weekly events to promote his "Health Security Act," he said Wednesday that the White House cannot compete with the millions of dollars spent by the insurance industry and other opponents to "trash the plan" on television.

After one such presidential event — a conference call with families who would be helped by the long-term-care benefits included in his plan — Clinton said he remains "pretty optimistic" that the basic changes in the health-care delivery system he is advocating will be adopted by Congress.

Clinton's comments came on the day a Washington Post-ABC News poll showed that 48 percent of Americans now disapprove of his plan and 44 percent favor it — the first time the plan's supporters were outnumbered by its opponents.

Public doubts are growing about the negative impact of Clinton's plan on the quality and costs of health care.

The American Association of Retired Persons decided last week against endorsing the president's plan. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce's board reversed itself and opposed requiring employers to pay for their employees' health insurance. Even the Jackson Hole Group, the health-care experts from industry and academia who inspired Clinton's plan, is counseling a more gradual approach to universal coverage.

Greg Schneiders, a Democratic political consultant and White House staff member in former President Jimmy Carter's administration, predicted Congress will pass a modest bill that modifies the health-insurance system but stops short of universal coverage.

Such legislation would prohibit insurance companies from denying coverage for pre-existing conditions, allow employees to move from job to job without losing insurance and force insurers to charge the same premiums for all those in a given market, known as community rating.

"There will be some high-minded language about universal coverage as a goal," Schneiders said.

In today's chaotic political atmosphere, the Schneiders outline appears to be doable if deadlock is avoided, but it is unclear how much further Congress can go with so many intra-party divisions.

Democrats are sharply divided between those who prefer a single-payer, Canadian-style system; those who want Clinton's comprehensive, "managed competition" system; and those who push a largely voluntary system of insurance modifications.

Republicans are similarly torn. While some have proposed bills that share the principles of Clinton's approach, conservatives can see no basis for compromise and reject the idea that there is a health-care crisis.

Republican members are meeting this week in Annapolis, Md., to discuss health care. The GOP seems far away from consensus, unless moderate members of the party agree to support the conservative wing's plan. If this were to happen, universal coverage would surely be pronounced dead.

Marlin Fitzwater, press secretary to former President George Bush, believes that all the negative talk about the Clinton plan is overstated. In the end, he predicted, the president will largely get his way.

In Clinton's State of the Union address, he threatened to veto any health-care bill that stopped short of universal coverage, in which every American would have a health card guaranteeing a standard package of health benefits.

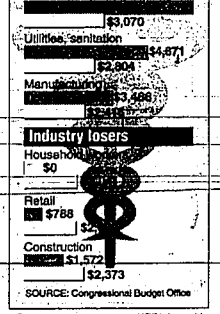

The Clinton plan would require all employers, including small businesses that currently don't offer health insurance, to pay a portion of their employees' premiums.

This "employer mandate" is seen as critical to achieving universal coverage under the Clinton health-care plan.

But opposition from major business groups such as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the National Federation of Independent Business, the Business Roundtable and the National Association of Manufacturers has left it with little business support.

Health reform costs for business

Under President Clinton's plan, employers would pay 80% of a worker's health insurance premium per year. How that would affect various industries:

Airplane sales lead takeoff in factory orders

WASHINGTON (AP) — A big increase in aircraft sales spurred a sixth consecutive rise in U.S. factory orders in January, sustaining the manufacturing strength that closed out 1993.

The Commerce Department said Thursday that orders rose 2.1 percent as the new year began, following a revised 1.4 percent gain in December.

The string of advances is the longest since one that ran from September 1987 to June 1988.

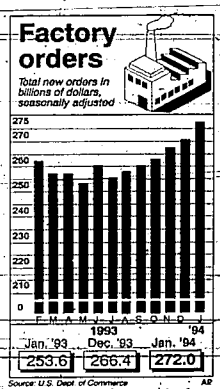

But the rise was due to highly volatile orders for aircraft and parts, and economists said it is unlikely manufacturing sales will continue to grow at the same pace.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said the number of Americans filing first-time claims for jobless benefits fell by 57,000 last week to the lowest level since Christmas. It was the steepest decline since August 1992.

Economists said the weather and other seasonal factors heavily influenced the report.

"On balance, the job market continues to improve sluggishly," analysts for Merrill Lynch and Co. said in a statement.

Also, the nation's big retailers reported generally good sales during February despite continuing harsh weather that kept many shoppers out of the stores. The Salomon Brothers retail index rose 6.4 percent last month after a 3.5 percent gain in January. The February advance is the biggest jump in the index since December 1992.

Laurence H. Meyer, a private economist in St. Louis, said the higher factory orders, which probably not sustainable, were in line with predictions for 3.5 percent overall economic growth in the first quarter.

"The last time transportation orders increased that much was in June, and they were down by more the next month," he said.

Transportation orders rose 14 percent, or $5 billion, to a total of $40.7 billion. Manufacturing orders excluding transportation increased a modest 0.3 percent and excluding defense orders were up 1.6 percent.

The surge in transportation orders could continue for awhile because Saudi Arabia has agreed to purchase 50 jetliners from U.S. companies for $5 billion. The purchase is not included in the January orders figures.

Rising orders can mean more jobs and increased production to meet demand. The Commerce Department also reported that unfilled orders increased for the first time in nearly a year, an indication demand is outpacing supply and more hiring may be on the way.

Financial markets have been on edge this week, fearing an overly robust economy would lead to higher interest rates and rising inflation. But the latest figures generally matched forecasts.

The Commerce Department said factory orders totaled a seasonally adjusted $272 billion, up from $266.4 billion in December.

Orders have risen every month since a 1.9 percent decline in July.

Manufacturing, which languished early in 1993, showed particular strength in the last quarter of the year when the economy expanded at a torrid 7.5 percent annual rate.

The Commerce Department said orders to U.S. factories for durable goods rose 3.7 percent in January, unchanged from a preliminary report last week. The seasonally adjusted total of $147.7 billion was up $5.2 billion from December due to the rise in sales of aircraft and parts.

It was the sixth consecutive monthly increase in orders for big-ticket items expected to last at least three years.

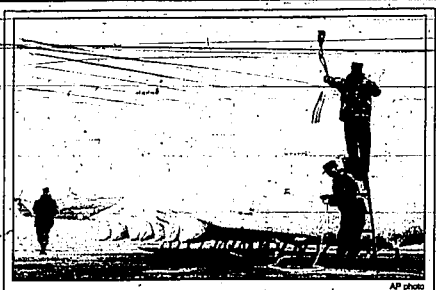

Orders for non-durable goods, such as food and fuel, increased 0.4 percent in January to a seasonally adjusted $124.3 billion, the fourth rise in the last five months.

Unfilled orders increased 0.6 percent, the first rise since February 1993.

The orders backlog is generally seen as a measure of whether current facilities and manpower are able to keep up with demand.

With extreme weather in much of the nation, shipments slipped 0.1 percent, after five straight increases. Shipments were down to $269.3 billion in January after a 1.6 percent increase the previous month.

Inventories increased 0.3 percent, the first rise since July.

U.S. soldiers in Mannheim, Germany, prepare 18 helicopters for transport to America. Special packing protects the $300,000 machines from salty sea air while in transit.

Army vacuum-packs choppers for transport

MANNHEIM, Germany (AP) — An eerie sight greeted drivers on roads near Mannheim on Thursday — U.S. Army helicopters wrapped in white plastic that made them look like they were trapped in cocoons of ice.

The 18 OH-58C helicopters were being transported by truck from Coleman Barracks in Mannheim to a nearby Rhine River port, where they are to be shipped to Antwerp, Belgium, then to the United States.

A process the military calls "shrink-wrapped," in which the helicopters are vacuum-packed in white plastic to protect them from salt-spray corrosion, gives them the ghostly appearance.

The officials said the OH-58Cs, which are valued at about $300,000 each, were just a small part of the military gear that is being pulled out of Europe in ongoing reductions.

From Eisenhower to Clinton, congressman didn't miss a vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like baseball's Lou Gehrig, 84-year-old William H. Natcher has been the iron-man-of-Congress, never missing a vote in a political career that stretches back to the first Eisenhower administration.

That streak ended Thursday when the Kentucky Democrat, too sick to leave his hospital bed, said that for the first time in 40 years he would not be on the House floor when a vote was being taken.

His record of 18,401 consecutive votes has never been approached, and House Speaker Tom Foley said it was a record "I believe will stand forever."

"Obviously this is a sad moment for all of us because of the unparalleled public service of Mr. Natcher," Foley, D-Wash., said in a tribute following Natcher's first missed vote since he was elected to Congress on Aug. 1, 1953. House members gave a standing ovation for their absent colleague.

Natcher, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, is a throwback to an older generation of lawmakers, rarely spending more than $10,000 on a campaign and driving by himself around Kentucky's mostly rural Second District, where Abraham Lincoln was born.

Natcher

The end came on a simple procedural vote that opened the House session Thursday.

His last four votes on Wednesday were his most difficult, with the frail octogenarian, suffering from intestinal and other ailments, being wheeled onto the House floor on a hospital gurney, complete with oxygen and intravenous tubes.

The day before, House leaders had agreed to suspend all legislative action at Natcher's request so the streak could be maintained.

Natcher himself has advised new members against trying to emulate him. "When you've been here as long as I have and never missed a day or vote, it's right around your neck," he once said.

Often it wasn't easy. His wife, Virginia, died in 1991 after 53 years of marriage. When she was very sick, he routinely flew home to be with her and then back to Washington the next day, day after day, in order to hold onto his record. Voting even kept him from making an appearance when President Carter visited his district in 1979.

On Thursday Natcher issued a statement that after consulting with his physicians, "I have very reluctantly decided to remain at Bethesda Naval Hospital for continued treatment, and I will not be able to return to Capitol Hill today."

"Throughout my entire public service," he said in a written statement, "I have never missed a single day of work, and during my tenure as a member of Congress, I never missed a day or a vote."

He said that while he will not be able to repeat that feat, "I will try because I believe members of Congress should vote."

Natcher gave no indication whether he planned to retire, and Foley said his decision to stay in the hospital for further treatment was an indication he still hoped to return to work.

But jockeying has already begun for succession to his powerful post as chairman of the Appropriations Committee. Among the leading candidates are Democrats Dave Obey of Wisconsin and Neal Smith of Iowa.

Steelworkers on job

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — The United Steelworkers ended a strike Thursday that had idled 4,700 Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. workers for two days.

Pickets in West Virginia, eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania came down after an agreement was reached on a new 2½-year contract.

The union struck Tuesday in a dispute over salaries, pensions, health care and other benefits.

Teen's name no fish story

CARPINTERIA, Calif. (AP) — A teen-ager casting about for a new name has reeled in a golden one: Trout Fishing in America.

So he went to court last week to legally change his name from Peter Eastman Jr. to Trout Fishing in America.

Trout said he decided to change his name to break away from tradition. "I am just saying I am not this little kid anymore. I want to be my own person."

"I really liked the book," Trout said. "He looks at the world in a way I like."

Anti-gay proposal booted from November election

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The state Supreme Court today struck from November's ballot a proposal to ban all local laws protecting gays from discrimination.

Florida's high court said the proposed constitutional amendment involved more than one subject. By law, citizen initiatives for such amendments must deal with only one subject.

The court also ruled that the ballot language was misleading. The justices' unanimous decision dealt only with the wording of the proposal and did not pass judgment on its intent.

The amendment was sponsored by the American Family Association of Florida. It was one of 11 pending or potential state ballot initiatives that gay groups say would prohibit recognition of gay civil rights or legislate discrimination against homosexuals.

Backers of the initiatives argue that homosexual behavior does not deserve or require group protection under civil rights laws.

The court review was triggered automatically after the association, a religious conservative group, collected 10 percent of the 429,428 signatures needed to make the ballot.

Backers would have to revise their proposal and submit nearly half a million signatures by mid-August to still get on November's ballot.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government could end peacetime registration for the military draft with little risk to U.S. security, the Pentagon said Thursday.

President Clinton said registration should continue temporarily.

Current all-volunteer forces and a reduced global threat make draft reinstatement "highly unlikely," the Defense Department concluded in a report to Congress. "Consequently, peacetime draft registration could be suspended without irreparable damage to national security."

The Pentagon stopped short of recommending an end to the Selective Service system, saying, "We should continue draft registration while we study possible alternative uses, such as applications to national service."

President Clinton said in a letter, also made public Thursday, that the Selective Service System should remain in place until the National Security Council concludes a similar review this spring.

"I concur in the secretary's recommendation that we should maintain registration while we study how to make the best use of Selective Service System capabilities and resources," Clinton wrote to Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., president pro tempore of the Senate.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore., made the report and letter public. Both are long-time advocates of ending peacetime registration for the draft, saying elimination would save taxpayers as much as $29 million a year without weakening U.S. defenses.

"There are no more excuses," said Hatfield, ranking Republican on the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"Our military manpower requirements do not depend upon potential draftees," he said.

DeFazio said, "For the first time in 14 years, we've gotten a straight answer from the Pentagon that says peacetime draft registration has nothing to do with real defense needs."

The report, "A Review of the Continued Requirement for Draft Registration," was completed in December and forwarded to the Senate in February.

"Peacetime draft registration could be suspended with no effect on military mobilization requirements, little effects on the time it would take to mobilize and no measurable effect on military recruitment," the Pentagon said.

Latest in long johns to take off

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Two astronauts will be sporting the latest in space fashion when they board Columbia for today's rescheduled launch: newly designed long johns to keep cool.

The beige skivvies embedded with thin water tubes will be worn by Commander John Casper and pilot Andrew Allen.

The astronauts will plug into water pumps once they're strapped into their cockpit seats for the planned 6:53 a.m. MST liftoff. Cold water will then be circulated through the garment until the crew reaches orbit or climbs out for another try another day.

The three others assigned to Columbia's 14-day science mission will wear the usual thermal long underwear, intended to keep astronauts warm in case they have to bail out over water on the way up or down. The new underwear still should serve that purpose; Casper and Allen will wear the garments for the ride back to Earth, too.

Astronauts often have been drenched by sweat while waiting 2½ to five hours to lift off, lying on their backs in the hot, cramped cockpit. Fans blow air through the flight suits, which doesn't help much on Florida's boiling summer days; Allen said the temperature inside the suits can soar into the 90s and beyond.

"It is a very hot and a very heavy and a very uncomfortable system," Allen said. "We get asked a lot whether we're comfortable or not, and the answer always is no."

Their new $500 long johns should help.

The long underwear — an off-the-shelf variety that was modified by Exotemp Systems Inc. of Canada — is similar to Exotemp garments worn by race car drivers, Navy divers and British and Canadian helicopter pilots during the Persian Gulf War. Racers and pilots want to keep cool; divers warm.

Casper said there's an added bonus for astronauts: Doctors believe the garment may help space travelers readapt more easily to gravity at the end of a flight. They should sweat less, and thus be better hydrated and less prone to dizziness upon return.

NASA plans to test the new underwear on five shuttle flights in 1994, beginning with this mission.

The only drawback to the new garment — called Thermo-Electric Liquid Cooling System in NASA-speak — seems to be skin indentations caused by the 230 feet of tubes.

"We look like Spiderman when we come out," Allen said.

The astronauts who will be wearing the traditional long johns for Columbia's launch — Marsha Ivins, Pierre Thuot and Charles "Sam" Gemar — can take heart in the fact that Friday morning should be cool, with temperatures in the high 50s to low 60s.

Ban on lunch refused

DENVER (AP) — Public officials can participate in a prayer luncheon on youth violence without violating the constitutional separation of church and state, a judge ruled Thursday.

Denver District Judge Larry Naves refused a request from the Freedom from Religion Foundation to bar four officials, including Gov. Roy Romer and Denver Mayor Wellington Webb, from any involvement in today's luncheon beyond attending the event as private citizens.

"It is consistent with their jobs for Romer and Webb to appear," Naves said.

Isn't $58 million a little pricey for City of Rocks?

If Ed Abbey were alive and living in Idaho, he'd probably be chipping arrowheads to defend City of Rocks from the tender mercies of the National Park Service. The old desert rat knew a Park Service ploy when he saw one, and there's a dandy brewing in the hills near Almo.

In case you haven't heard, the Park Service wants to improve the rustic recreation area known as City of Rocks. It's a commendable idea and the agency is proposing to do some commendable things – at a commendable price of $58.46 million.

Wow. $58.64 million for little ol' City of Rocks.

In fairness, visitation is rising and some new facilities may be needed. The area is a magnet for history buffs, who are drawn because it lies astride the old California Trail. The wild jumble of rocks is also an internationally famous climbing Mecca, regularly visited by alpinists from around the world.

As things stand, there are only about 80 primitive campsites available and restroom facilities are modest. There may be a need for more visitor facilities as the next millenium approaches.

But $58.46 million worth?

Does City of Rocks really need a 100-site RV park – at a cost of $5.61 million? Or a visitor center which, by the time it's operational, will cost around $4.57 million? Or millions of dollars worth of staff housing?

Rest assured of one thing: If those things are built, the Park Service will promote them and people will come – perhaps as many as 300,000 a year. In some circles, that's known as artificially created demand.

Even David Pugh, the Park Service's superintendent for the City of Rocks, concedes that the plan is ambitious.

"Do we really need to build all of this up front?" Pugh asks. "That's a reasonable criticism."

"Pave it, get people to pay a toll and have 'em drive out the other end – that's what the National Park Service knows how to do," charges Buhl resident Tom McCauley, who has camped with his family at City of Rocks for years. McCauley likes the sleepy character of the place and doesn't want to see it drowned beneath a rising tide of asphalt, RVs and fast food wrappers.

It's worthy of note that even the "no-action" alternative in the Park Service's plan would cost $2.87 million. Even by government standards, that's an expensive bit of inactivity.

Some highlights from the Park Service's "no-action" alternative: $6,007 for an interpretive sign; a $44,304 parking lot for five cars; a two-toilet outhouse for $93,600; four miles of fence for $398,661; and a couple of homes (with attached garages) for $552,552 – or a mere $276,000 apiece.

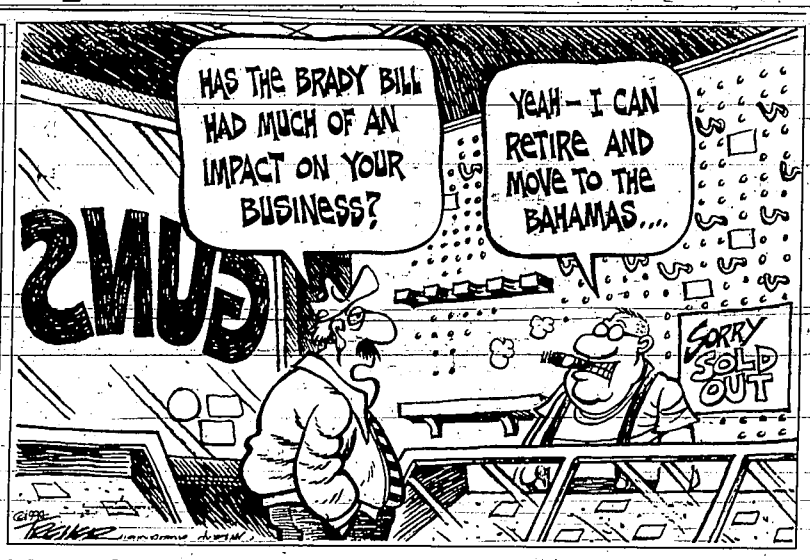

Wouldn't all that be nice to have? It depends who's paying the bills.

For the time being anyway, we think it's too expensive for the American taxpayer – and not necessarily the right future for City of Rocks.

Let's do E911 the right way

The voters of four counties voted to add a surcharge to their phone bill on Nov. 5, 1990. This surcharge was to provide the citizens of the four counties with a new enhanced emergency communications system.

After the vote, we waited ... and waited ... and waited for the long-promoted system. A group of citizens, mostly from Twin Falls County, had been meeting for 10 months to educate themselves and the public on the system. Once the vote was cast, it became the responsibility of the county commissioners in the four counties to form a joint powers board.

In the minutes obtained by former Councilwoman Pam Dowd under the Freedom of Information Act, there are no minutes provided for any meetings prior to April 17, 1991. At that meeting, "letters of agreement" were examined and "letters of understanding" were distributed. The minutes do not say if these two documents are one and the same.

In a Times-News article, a board member is quoted as saying this agreement is the legally binding agreement. However, a further check of the minutes indicates that on Jan. 27, 1992, 447 days after the vote of the people, Gooding and Jerome counties were still not sure if they wanted to participate.

In the period of time between Nov. 5, 1990, and Dec. 31, 1991, there are seven months with no minutes provided. Yet, it is apparent that at some point, discussions were being held and agreements on the terms of the documents were being decided. With seven meetings in 14 months, is it any wonder things were slow to progress?

At no point in the minutes does it indicate whether any one of the elected county commissioners had an attorney general's opinion on the Idaho codes. Retired Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn did question the Idaho codes, but the minutes never indicated a response.

If indeed the April 1991 agreement is the legally binding agreement as stated by a board member, then perhaps the board can explain why the minutes of Jan. 27, 1992, say that Gooding and Jerome counties' participation in the Joint Powers Agreement hinges on the decision of each other.

The Twin Falls City Council was not invited into the discussion concerning the enhanced system until well after many decisions had been made. We were concerned about the quality and quantity of service. However, we believed our elected officials would bring this system to our people in a businesslike manner.

We believed in the regional concept and would like to see the system work. However, any system must be done correctly and within the Idaho codes as they existed at that time.

Judge Ted V. Wood, in a memorandum decision in January, declared the E-911 Board did not have the legal authority to form joint powers agreements for emergency communication systems across county lines. He also declared the four counties had exceeded the 180-day deadline for executing the joint powers agreement.

The E-911 Board disagrees with the judge's decision. However, an April 28, 1993, amendment refers to the document of April 13, 1992, as the Joint Powers Agreement to be amended.

The minutes, financial records, joint powers agreements, attorney's letters and engineer's statements were obtained by former Councilwoman Dowd under the Freedom of Information Act. They make interesting reading.

It is the duty of elected officials to act in a reasonable and proper manner and to conduct meetings as provided under the Open Meeting Law. Either this board did not do so, or it did not keep accurate minutes. Which is it?

We can have a project without spending almost $1 million for a building and up to another $3 million to $4 million for the equipment and whatever else is dreamed up in the heads of those who hold the purse strings.

The decision-making process, in some instances, appears flawed and may be in direct conflict with the Idaho Open Meeting Law. The Idaho codes governing emergency communication systems do not appear to have been researched by the elected officials in charge of the project. As elected officials, we are bound by oath to uphold the laws of the state of Idaho – even on this issue. Disregarding the Idaho codes as they existed in 1990 and as they exist today would open all of us up to further legal challenges within the court system.

The city of Twin Falls has not withdrawn its support of the regional concept. It has withdrawn its financial support of the operations and management until the legal issues are settled by either the courts or the attorney general.

Does the city of Twin Falls believe a regional enhanced communication system can work? Yes.

Does the city of Twin Falls want the inconsistencies of the past 39 months to continue. No.

Idaho Falls has shown us that it can be done at less than half the cost of this proposed plan. It is not in the financial best interests of any citizen within the four counties to keep riding the white elephant.

We can all meet in a room and work out the small issues, but the legal hurdles have not yet been resolved. Those are the issues that morally and legally must be addressed for the benefit of the good of all.

Tom Condie is a Twin Falls City Council member and former mayor.

Is it not odd, after five years of investigation, the savings and loan fiasco finally came to the conclusion that the cost is in excess of $150 billion to taxpayers? All the loans made by the savings and loans are guaranteed by the United States of America.

The records kept by the savings and loans must have been destroyed. Did officials commit felonies? Shouldn't the records show who received and who signed for the savings and loans? Is it against the law to force the uncovering of records? No mention of records has ever been reported. Why? Surely records don't self-destruct or walk out of a bank. Would many officials sign for many loans, all of which were poor risks? Did fires happen to cause records to vanish? The borrowers couldn't have done this. Could all of the borrowers be found and forced to pay? To whom will the investigators report? Five years to find how much the cost, but to whom? How many officials are guilty of how much in each savings and loan bank? What happened to the examiners who audited banks at least once a year? The white-collared workers really hit a jackpot. Now there aren't enough prisons to hold all the violators.

Officer takes time for youth

In response to the letter "Officer too busy for student":

After reading Mrs. Thuren's letter, I felt I would like to tell a story of my own.

Some 20-plus years ago while shopping with my parents at Safeway in the Lynwood, I met Jim Mildon for the first time. I can't tell you why Jim started talking to me.

I was probably being disruptive or something of that nature. Anyway, after a brief conversation, Jim explained he was a police officer in addition to his part-time job as a store clerk.

The following Saturday morning, a knock at the door of our home interrupted cartoons. It was Jim. He took my brother and me out to his patrol car. He showed us around and explained various pieces of equipment and then left, as then, too, he had other things to do.

I am now 32 and have had other occasions to run into Officer Mildon, and not all were on the same terms as the first. Each time, though, my respect and admiration for this police officer grew.

As Twin Falls and its police department have grown since then, as I understand, it now has a full-time officer for occasions such as your stepson's assignment. As you know, his name is Officer Curt Gambrel. I'm sure your stepson's second choice was as good as his first. I've heard many good things about Officer Gambrel and the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program.

I hope the boy's vision of Officer Mildon is soon restored.

The last thing I have to say is to Mrs. Thuren: Can you honestly say that every time your stepson has asked for some of your time, you could give it?

Adoption is abortion alternative

An excellent letter was written by Kelly Scott of Twin Falls.

It saddens me to think that someone is pregnant and ends their pregnancy because they do not want to be bothered or be a mother. There are plenty of women that would love to be bothered and be a mother.

What is nine months out of someone's life to ask? Women really need to sit down and think about abortion. Yes, they are our bodies, but who is going to speak for the unborn. There is a choice, there is adoption.

Walton sly, homophobic

Kelly Walton, you are an intelligent, sly young fox. However, I believe your obsession with the Idaho Citizens Alliance issue has affected your ability to use logic and common sense in justifying your hate for homosexuals. Your reader's comment confirms my belief.

You claim that, Fact No. 3, Homosexuals comprise 1 percent of the population then later in the same fact say that 65.46 percent of men are bisexual. This is the last time that word appears in your comment. The word homosexual appeared nine times.

Why do I call you a sly young fox? Thorndike's theory of learning is repetition. This is the basis of all learning skills, be they mental or physical. It can also be called "brainwashing."

Why do I call you irrational and illogical? Everybody knows that "homos" can't reproduce and will die out by attrition.

So I say to you, Kelly, the 1 percent are not the ones we should be concerned with. It is the two out of three men (65.46 percent) that we females have to look out for.

Also, I noticed that we females were not important enough to be considered a threat to society? Doesn't this make you a homophobic? Don't we females exist in your mind? We are one-half of the population!

Mildon a fine friend, officer

Regarding Melonie Thuren's letter on Feb. 28 concerning Sgt. Jim Mildon:

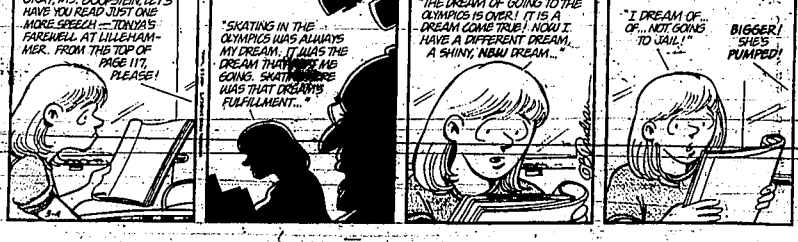

Jim Mildon is a personal friend of mine as well as an outstanding law enforcement officer. Your complaint of Sgt. Mildon not having time to help your stepson with a homework assignment seems petty. Sgt. Mildon volunteers a large amount of his free time to help young people by coaching a junior high football team or just with them one-on-ones to take care of a personal problem. There have been several occasions when Jim has been called away from a nice dinner with his family to help someone with a problem.

I am proud to call Jim my friend, and I feel lot better knowing Sgt. Mildon and other officers like him spend so much of their time trying to make our little world a lot safer.

Game continues as Russia charges U.S. diplomat with spying

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia struck back in the spy vs. spy squabble with the West Thursday, saying an American diplomat urged two Russian men to collect secret plans for Russia's most sophisticated battle tank.

Western arms experts expressed surprise at the news that the T-82 tank even exists; the spokesman for Russia's top spy-catching agency said Thursday's announcement was the first confirmation of its existence.

It was the latest in a flurry of charges and countercharges by Russian and Western intelligence agencies prompted by last month's arrest of an alleged CIA mole in Washington.

Russian officials have been miffed by the hand-wringing and rhetoric from U.S. officials who angrily demanded Russia stop spying on the United States.

Thursday's announcement further supported Russia's claim that the West still spies on it, too. On Tuesday, Russia disclosed it had charged a Russian defense industry executive with spying for Britain.

In the past week, Russia and the United States have both ordered the expulsion of diplomats in a tit-for-tat exchange reminiscent of the Cold War.

Alexander Mikhailov, spokesman for Russia's Federal Counterintelligence Service, told The Associated Press that the American diplomat in the tank spying case was Kelli Ann Hamilton.

The switchboard operator at the U.S. Embassy said there was no one there by that name. But a phone list from last spring lists a Kelli Hamilton as a second secretary at the embassy.

"We don't comment on allegations of intelligence activities," an embassy spokesman said.

Mikhailov said one of the two Russian men, 23-year-old businessman Maxim Alyoshin, contacted Hamilton in January 1993, offering to gather secrets about the Russian tank. They met several times inside the embassy.

Alyoshin said he wanted to work for U.S. intelligence to get $50,000 to pay his debts. Mikhailov said, adding that the man apparently was never paid by the Americans.

Mikhailov said the diplomat told Alyoshin to gather information about Uralvagonzavod, a plant in the Urals city of Nizhny Tagil that produces the T-82 tanks.

In Nizhny Tagil, Alyoshin met Igor Motorin, a 39-year-old worker at the tank plant, who obtained four copies of the factory's general plan, Mikhailov said. Alyoshin returned to Moscow and gave the documents to the diplomat, who then urged him to get secret data on the T-82 tank's armor and electronics, the spokesman said.

Alyoshin and Motorin failed to get the information, Mikhailov said. The two were detained by authorities last March.

U.S. suspends Korean exercises

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States agreed Thursday to resume high-level talks with North Korea and to suspend military exercises with South Korea.

The announcement followed the start earlier in the day of international nuclear inspections in the North and talks at the border between North and South Korea. A State Department official said a third round of U.S.-North Korea talks is to begin in Geneva, Switzerland, on March 21 and the training exercises would be suspended for this year only.

South Korea announced suspension of the exercises before the release of a State Department statement that said the decision "will not weaken our joint capabilities." North Korea had viewed the exercises as preparation for war.

Both steps depend on the success of the inspections that began Thursday at seven North Korean nuclear sites and on the exchange of special envoys between North and South Korea, said Undersecretary of State Lynn Davis, who informed Congress of the measures at a hearing.

And Winston Lord, assistant secretary of state for Asian affairs, told a briefing that the status of the military exercise depends up "successful completion of the inspections and exchange of envoys between the North and South."

The United States has no diplomatic relations with North Korea and has had only low-level contact since a dispute over International Atomic Energy Agency inspections began a year ago.

Sens. Charles Robb, D-Va., and Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, both criticized the diplomatic steps.

Robb said he found it "personally disquieting" that the United States had given in with such minimal compliance.

Murkowski said administration officials should have waited for agreement to inspect two other critical nuclear waste sites.

Davis said North Korea understands that concrete steps will be necessary for improved relations. The U.S. goal, she said, is to create a nuclear-free Korean peninsula.

U.S. officials have said they believe the North has an active nuclear weapons program, but North Korea says it is only developing peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

Davis said U.S. officials were not satisfied with North Korea's actions so far but described the beginning of inspections as "an important step that shows some progress."

She said the talks in Geneva would be aimed at full resolution of the nuclear issue, including inspection of additional sites. North Korea "must demonstrate in actions, not just words, that it is renouncing a nuclear weapons capability," she said.

The United States would be prepared to reciprocate "with measures to address North Korea's stated security concerns and to move in the direction of improved political and economic relations," she said.

Davis said, however, she expected negotiations to be "a long and protracted process."

If the North chooses to pursue the development of nuclear weapons, she said, the United States would seek international sanctions.

Davis, who will accompany Secretary of State Warren Christopher to China next week, said China shares U.S. opposition to nuclear weapons development in North Korea. Christopher will seek support from the Chinese for any sanctions that might be applied.

Smiles notwithstanding, South Korean negotiators, right, and their counterparts from North Korea broke off negotiations Thursday. South Korea says it needs Patriot missiles to ensure its safety, but North Korean wants the missile deployment canceled before talks resume.

Israel releases 400 Palestinian prisoners

IRAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israel freed 400 Palestinian prisoners Thursday in a so-far vain effort to stop violence ignited by the Hebron mosque massacre, while it faces growing defiance from Jewish extremists.

Despite releasing 1,000 prisoners the past three days, there has been no sign that outraged Palestinians in the occupied territories would stop protesting and return to stalled peace talks.

"This release won't change the hatred between us and the settlers," said 19-year-old Yasser Sharabati, a Palestinian activist freed Thursday.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin is facing growing defiance from extremist Jewish settlers in the territories. Following last week's attack by a settler who mowed down at least 39 Palestinian worshipers in a mosque, the army disarmed 18 settlers and banned them from Palestinian areas.

The crackdown has focused on Kach and Kahane Lives, militant Jewish movements inspired by the late Meir Kahane, an extremist anti-Arab militant.

Settler leaders Thursday called on them to resist being disarmed.

One leader, Uri Ariel, said settlers shouldn't use violence against troops. But the crackdown sharpened their confrontation with the government.

One of the fugitives, Nathan Levy, brazenly attended a brief news conference Thursday in Jerusalem with nine Kach activists, some carrying guns. A senior Kach leader, Michael Ben-Ari, denounced "the witch-hunt" and declared: "The majority of people are behind the persecuted Kach movement."

The national news agency Itim reported that radical settlers in Hebron and the nearby settlement of Kiryat Arba have said they won't surrender their weapons if attempts are made to disarm them.

The mosque gunman, New York native Dr. Baruch Goldstein, came from Kiryat Arba, and his grave there has now become a shrine for Israeli extremists.

Talks to ease tension break down over plan to deploy U.S. missiles

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The first talks between North and South Korea in four months broke down Thursday when North Korea demanded that plans to deploy Patriot missiles in South Korea be scrapped.

Negotiators agreed, however, to meet again Wednesday in the border village of Panmunjom.

"There was no progress," Song Young-dae, the chief South Korean delegate, said.

A tense mood prevailed throughout the nearly 24-hour meeting, and delegates on both sides reluctantly shook hands when they parted.

The meeting, was the first since November.

In Washington, Undersecretary of State Lynn Davis said this year's U.S.-South Korea "Team Spirit" exercises had been suspended. North Korea has denounced the exercises as preparations for a nuclear war.

The main point of Thursday's meeting between the two Koreas was exchanging special envoys to resolve the dispute over mutual nuclear inspections and other bilateral problems. But the delegates never got down to any meaningful discussion.

The session turned sour when North Korean envoys demanded that South Korea promise first to cancel plans to deploy U.S. Patriot anti-missile batteries in its territory.

U.S. officials say South Korea needs the missiles to deter North Korean rocket attacks.

Nuclear inspections under way

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Experts from the International Atomic Energy Agency began inspecting North Korean nuclear facilities Thursday for the first time in more than a year.

Spokesman Hans-Friedrich Meyer said at agency headquarters in Vienna that a seven-member team had started work at Yongbyon, the location of a large nuclear research complex.

The start of inspections follows months of stalling by North Korea, while concern mounted among its neighbors and Western governments that it may be hiding a nuclear-weapons program.

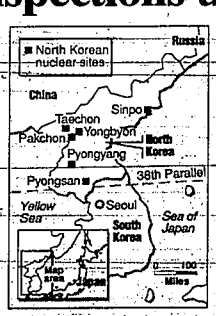

North Korea, however, still refuses to allow outside visits to two other sites that inspectors suspect could be involved with nuclear weapons.

IAEA officials have not conducted a full inspection at Yongbyon since February 1992, although representatives were allowed in last May and August to change film and batteries in monitoring equipment.

The current inspections, expected to take about two weeks, are intended to determine whether any nuclear materials have been diverted to possible weapons development.

North Korea says its nuclear program is peaceful.

But it has resisted inspections for a year, and at one point threatened to pull out of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. North Korean officials have accused the West of trying to use the IAEA to spy on military installations.

The North agreed to inspections of its seven declared nuclear sites after talks with the United States last week. Washington, in turn, promised to cancel military exercises with South Korea and resume high-level talks on improving ties.

Undersecretary of State Lynn Davis confirmed Thursday to a Senate subcommittee that the exercises have been cancelled for this year.

Six of the seven declared facilities are at Yongbyon, about 60 miles from Pyongyang, the capital.

They include a 5-megawatt reactor, a radio-chemical laboratory, a fuel fabrication plant, two research reactors and a fuel storage facility.

The seventh declared facility is a university research reactor in Pyongyang.

Tenuous cease-fires hold near Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — French peacekeepers fired a warning burst from a machine gun Thursday to quiet another truce violation along the Sarajevo front, and U.N. officials appealed for nearly 11,000 more soldiers.

Yasushi Akashi, chief of the U.N. mission in former Yugoslavia, said the troops are needed to secure truces between Serbs and the Muslim-led government in Sarajevo and between Croats and Muslims in central and southwestern Bosnia.

He said both cease-fires generally were holding but expressed concern about increasing violations.

"We very much need not only the full compliance by the parties of the agreements they have already accepted or reached, but also we need additional resources, additional personnel," he said in Zagreb, Croatia.

Akashi said he needed 4,600 more soldiers for Sarajevo and 6,050 for the rest of Bosnia. That would nearly double the number of peacekeepers in Bosnia.

With the United States declining to commit troops without an overall peace accord, and Britain, France and Canada reluctant to send more troops, it was unclear where Akashi might get additional peacekeepers.

The U.N. mission's military chief, Gen. Jean Cot of France, said reinforcements were needed immediately to avoid "losing what has been done."

Cot had harsh words for the U.S. decision not to commit ground troops unless the Bosnian factions work out a peace settlement. That policy is "not very courageous," he said.

The United States does have a large contingent of warplanes in the NATO force that patrols Bosnia's skies. Two U.S. F-16 fighter jets shot down four Serb warplanes that U.N. officials said bombed a Bosnian government arms factory Monday about 45 miles northwest of Sarajevo.

A NATO threat to use warplanes to bomb Serb artillery around Sarajevo ended the shelling of the besieged capital by forcing the Serbs to remove their tanks, howitzers and mortars.

The ultimatum on Sarajevo bolstered a U.N.-mediated truce that has generally held for three weeks, the longest in the city in nearly two years.

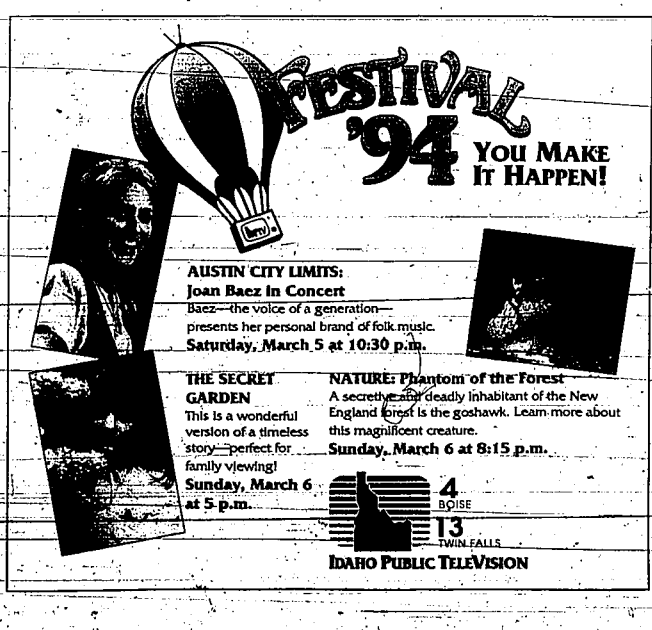

Rebels release Yank

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Leftist rebels released an American gold miner to a priest and a Red Cross delegate after holding him in captivity for a year, authorities said Thursday.

Louis Manning was handed over Wednesday by four rebels in a jungle region of Choco state in western Colombia, said the Rev. Guillermo Vega, the priest who participated in the release.

Manning was abducted on Feb. 22, 1993, Vega said.

State will fight U.S. fish policy

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Alaska has gone to court in efforts to reverse a federal policy that shut down a southeastern Alaska commercial fishery for 11 days last year to protect one or two Snake River salmon.

On Wednesday, Alaska joined Idaho, Oregon and a coalition of Northwest fisheries and conservation groups that also have filed lawsuits challenging the way the federal government is trying to stop the decline of Pacific Northwest salmon.

Snake River salmon stocks have dropped dramatically in the past three decades. The spring-summer and fall chinook salmon runs are listed as threatened under the Endangered Species Act.

Studies show hydroelectric dams on the Columbia and Snake rivers are the primary killers of Snake River salmon. But according to Alaska's complaint, Southeast Alaska trollers are being forced to pay for the damage caused by the dams.

Alaska trollers catch about 62 chinook headed for the Snake River each year. But biologists say only 14 of those fish likely would have survived the ocean to reach their spawning grounds.

"Only one-quarter of 1 percent of human-induced mortality is associated with fisheries conducted in southeast Alaska," the state wrote.

The state wants an order that would force the federal government to operate the dams in a way that doesn't jeopardize the Snake River salmon. It also wants a recovery plan developed for the runs.

Filed in U.S. District Court in Anchorage, the suit names the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation and the National Marine Fisheries Service, which last year issued a report saying the decline should be halted by restricting fishing.

"You possibly save one or two fish to go back and spawn, and yet you kill most of them with the dams," said Cheri Jacobus, the assistant attorney general who filed the state's lawsuit.

"You're asking the Southeast Alaska trollers to bear the brunt of this, and it's not even likely to work."

Fishing and conservation groups said they welcomed the state's action. The Alaska Trollers Association estimates the fleet lost $1 million because of last summer's closures. The trollers had criticized the state for failing to take action after their fishing time was cut.

Fishing has been reduced throughout the Northwest because of the flawed policy, said Pat Ford, an Idaho-based representative of the group Save Our Wild Salmon. The salmon harvest "is a pretty small factor in the endangerment of Snake River salmon," he said. "The federal government has refused to see it that way ... and hopefully this Alaska lawsuit will change their minds."

Sewer workers wait for police

SPOKANE (AP) — This is a case that definitely stinks.

Spokane sewer workers have been waiting since Monday for officers to begin an investigation into vandalism of a pipe that caused $15,000 in damage when a hillside washed out.

Sewer workers said they have a possible suspect, but police had not shown much interest as of Wednesday evening.

"That report will be assigned" to investigating officers, Assistant Police Chief Dave Peffer said. "I don't think there is any particular urgency to this."

Engineer Bill Peacock and a crew of 42 workers felt urgency Monday night, when they spent 10 hours piling sandbags so an 18-inch sewer line would not break.

Peacock said it will cost as much as $15,000 to rebuild the hillside and shore up two pipelines exposed by the washout.

Utah amendment to protect male clubs

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Legislature passed a bill to allow the Elks and other fraternal organizations to discriminate against women and still hold state liquor licenses.

The Utah House, in the final hours of the session that ended Wednesday at midnight, voted 39-35 to amend the state's Civil Rights Act to exclude fraternal, sororal or charitable organizations from some provisions.

The Senate passed the bill earlier. Gov. Mike Leavitt would not say whether he intends to sign, veto or allow the measure to become law without his signature.

Ex-deputy can pursue lawsuit against sheriff

HAILEY – The Idaho Supreme Court has ruled that former deputy sheriff Eugene Farnworth may pursue parts of his lawsuit against Blaine County Sheriff J. Walter Femling.

Farnworth worked as a deputy sheriff in Blaine County for 11 years before Femling declined to reappoint him following the 1988 election.

Farnworth opposed Femling in both the primary and general elections.

The court ruled that Farnworth is entitled to proceed with his contention that the sheriff violated his First Amendment rights by not reappointing him after the election.

Farnworth must prove that his campaign statements opposing the sheriff "were a substantial or motivating factor" in the sheriff's decision to fire him, the court ruled.

The court also reinstated Farnworth's claim for damages under the Idaho Tort Claims Act.

Farnworth's case had been dismissed in district court.

E911 board meeting tonight looks at pending legislation

JEROME – The four-county "enhanced" 911 board plans a special meeting tonight to discuss pending legislation and what action, if any, will be taken on a construction contract for a regional dispatch center.

The public is invited to attend and participate at the 7:30 p.m. meeting at the Land Title and Escrow conference room at 237 N. Lincoln in Jerome.

TWIN FALLS – A 36-year-old Boise man was arrested early Thursday morning after leading city and county police on a chase through the eastern and central sections of town.

Richard Kelly Carlson was arraigned on a felony charge of eluding a police officer and held on $1,500 bond.

Cpl. Joann Loveland of the Twin Falls Police Department said she saw Carlson's car driving south on Blue Lakes Boulevard without his headlights turned on at about 1:30 a.m. Thursday.

The driver appeared to match the description of an intruder reported at a Harrison Street home, Loveland said.

Loveland pulled the driver over and was making radio contact with the police station when the driver sped off down Blue Lakes, she said.

A chase ensued down Blue Lakes to Seventh Avenue East to Locust Street to Addison Avenue East, with speeds as fast as 85 mph, she said.

Carlson turned up at about 3:10 a.m. as he was walking along Addison Avenue. A breath test taken later revealed a blood alcohol content of .13. The legal limit is .10.

Senate panel recommends Smith for 2nd term on board

BOISE – Leon Smith, Jr. of Twin Falls won support Thursday for a new six-year term on the Idaho Transportation Board.

On a unanimous voice vote, the Senate Transportation Committee recommended approval of Smith's nomination to the board, which has authority over state highways and supervises the Idaho Transportation Department.

The full Senate must confirm Smith's nomination. He was appointed to the board in 1991.

Smith, 56, is a partner in the Twin Falls law firm of Smith & Beeks. He has served as mayor of Twin Falls and as Twin Falls County prosecuting attorney.

Missing funds prompt county probe

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – The county clerk's office will hold a closed-door disciplinary hearing this morning involving money that has disappeared during the past three years, the lawyer for one county employee says.

"There is money that has not been accounted for," attorney Lisa Barini-Garcia said Thursday.

Barini-Garcia said her client is a low-level employee of the Twin Falls County clerk's office. She refused to name her client.

County action began soon after her client refused an Idaho Bureau of Investigation lie-detector test, she said.

Twin Falls County Clerk Bob Fort said he "will not deny nor affirm that" any wrongdoings have occurred in his office.

"I can't say that something couldn't have happened," Fort said Thursday.

IBI spokesman Bill Overton said he could not comment Thursday on any investigation concerning Twin Falls County.

Barini-Garcia contends that her client is being singled out as "the scapegoat" for problems throughout the clerk's office.

"She has not been accused of stealing money," Barini-Garcia said. "But, of course, the implication is there."

She also said that her client's competence has been called into question.

But Barini-Garcia contends that if funds have been funneled out of the county's books for the past three years, the competence of the employer is as much in question as that of the employee.

Money received by the county's court services division is collected and tallied on a daily basis, Fort said. Those figures are measured against a computerized print-out of the day's receipts and sent to the county's deputy auditor.

The deputy auditor records a daily auditing certificate and makes a copy of that certificate for the county treasurer and another copy for bookkeeping purposes, Fort said.

Several employees handle the money during the time a resident pays a citation or a bail bond and the time that money enters the county's accounts.

But Fort said he sees no inherent problems in the county's accounting procedures.

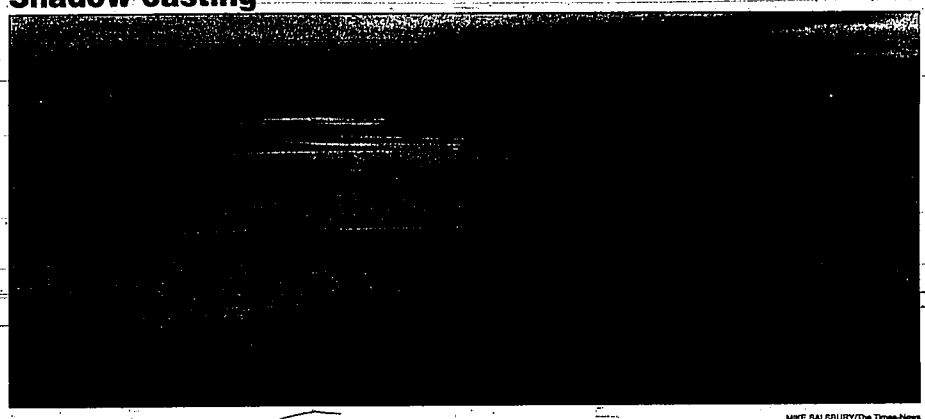

"I thought it was a basically sound system when I examined it," he said. "If someone is doctoring records to make things balance – that's something the IBI can find out," he said.

The county holds disciplinary hearings for cases in which "action in excess of a written warning is being considered by the elected official," according to the county's personnel manual.

The employee has the opportunity in that hearing to give his or her position and to offer reasons why the county should forgo disciplinary action.

County Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan said he could not comment before today's hearing.

Changes afoot for rural mail routes; better start using that grid address

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – While Twin Falls mail carriers are warning their customers this week of "massive" changes this month, mail service through the Twin Falls Post Office isn't expected to change much.

Carriers are alerting rural residents and businesses around Twin Falls that rural-route and box-number addresses won't be tolerated after this month.

Robert Semple, a supervisor of the Twin Falls Post Office, said mail carriers are rearranging their delivery routes and schedules because Twin Falls is growing.

"It's due to the growth naturally," Semple said.

Growth around the east, south, and west edges of the city is causing uneven burdens of excess mail on some rural routes, he said.

And to help make the new routes easier to drive, mail carriers want all rural customers to use their county "grid" address.

"If you're using your street address or your grid address then there should be no problem," Semple said.

Semple said only a few people still use route-and-box addresses.

And with the new delivery routes for mail carriers, some residents and businesses may begin to see their mail coming sooner or later in the day. Customers may also notice a new person delivering their mail.

County wins OK to kill buffalo gnats

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE – Buffalo gnats, beware! The county's comin' to gitcha.

The House unanimously approved legislation Thursday authorizing county commissioners to control the gnats and other livestock insect pests.

Buffalo gnats, also known as black flies, are about one-fifth the size of a common house fly. Swarms of the gnats attack livestock – especially their ears – in the summertime, distracting the animals and making them difficult to handle. They also are suspected of carrying viral livestock diseases.

For years, sheepmen and other livestock owners paid for insecticide to be applied in the upper end of the Twin Falls canal system, where most of the gnats lay their eggs.

But the insecticide no longer works because the gnats have developed immunity to it. Last year, it killed up to 30 percent of the insects.

Twin Falls County contributed $10,000 last year for a test program using a bacterial insecticide to control the pesky gnats. But a complete program would cost up to $50,000, Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said, and because of a glitch in state law the county doesn't have the authority to control insects that prey on livestock.

The Senate already has approved the bill. If Gov. Cecil Andrus signs it, Hempleman said, livestock owners may petition to form a special insect-control district in Twin Falls County to run the control program.

$28 million public works law includes $5.3 million for CSI library, center

The Associated Press

BOISE – Gov. Cecil Andrus on Thursday signed into law a $28.8 million public works budget that provides construction money to every college campus in the state.

The bill included $5.3 million for a library and academic center at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls.

In a hastily called signing ceremony, Andrus approved the construction package that cleared both houses unanimously.

The bill is $5.2 million more than the governor recommended spending from the $81 million surplus on college campus construction. The difference is a change in the project slated for Boise State University and the inclusion of a project for Lewis-Clark State College in Lewiston, the only campus Andrus had left off his list.

Andrus had recommended $2 million – to be matched by private contributions – for phase two of the College of Technology at Boise State. But state lawmakers, responding to the priority of university officials and students, provided $6.2 million for a new classroom building.

The governor said the school actually needed both projects.

In Lewiston, the Republican legislative plan embraced by Democrats allocated $924,100 for a classroom, laboratory and storage facility.

The bill also included:

- $7.8 million for a physical science building at Idaho State University in Pocatello.
- $2.4 million for renovation of the old library building at North Idaho College in Coeur d'Alene.
- $3.6 million for a classroom and laboratory building at Eastern Idaho Technical College in Idaho Falls.
- $2.1 million for renovation of engineering and physical science space at the University of Idaho in Moscow.
- $500,000 for planning a $7.3 million building to house the Historical Library and State Archives.

No charges in Gooding death

By Mark Kind
Times-News writer

GOODING – No charges will be filed in connection with the Jan. 23 death of Robert Wesley Dunn of Wendell, Prosecuting Attorney Philip Brown said.

In a news release several weeks ago, the Gooding County Sheriff's Department said Dunn apparently was run over by a friend who had dropped him off at his rural Wendell home shortly after 1 a.m. that Sunday morning.

This week, Brown identified Doug Benson, a Jerome County dairyman, as the friend who drove Dunn home. But Brown said he has too little evidence to bring charges against Benson in Dunn's death.

"All that could be proved was an accident," Brown said. "I couldn't say who ran over him."

Benson told investigators that he did not think he ran over anyone, Brown said.

Benson hung up during a telephone interview Thursday with The Times-News after refusing to discuss the death.

Brown said that Dunn had been drinking heavily while out that night with Benson, but he did not know whether Benson also had been drinking.

Benson was driving a pickup with a "gooseneck" livestock trailer the night Dunn died, Brown said.

He allowed sheriff's investigators to examine the bottom of the trailer after the death; they found no evidence that it had run over anyone, Brown said.

A coroner's report said Dunn probably died of massive trauma to the chest.

Benson served as one of the pallbearers at Dunn's funeral on Jan. 27, according to Demaray Funeral Chapel.

Burdick resigns position on Jerome City Council

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME – City Council member Janet "J.C." Burdick turned in her resignation Tuesday after serving on the council for 2½ years.

Mayor Gerald Ostler said it would be hard to replace Burdick. "She was a good one."

Burdick is moving to Twin Falls because her husband, Roger Burdick, was appointed as a 5th District Court judge.

Ostler plans to appoint her replacement at the March 15 council meeting. He said he would select his appointment from among four candidates, after consulting each council member.

The candidates are Ernie Brooks, a former councilman, Ed Churchman, Marjorie DuBois, and Jeff "Buzz" Zimmerman.

"I can tell you I had up to 20 names mentioned to me, that I could have used, but as of now there are only three or four left that I'm considering," Ostler said. "Three of these I have had personal contact with."

Ostler said he would not reveal his selection until the March 15 council meeting. After the mayor gives his choice, the council must vote and approve the selection.

"I'm going to talk to the council one at a time, to be sure they are in agreement," Ostler said. He said it would be

House members don't like bill requiring campaign contributors to disclose employers

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE – A bill that would require contributors to political campaigns to disclose their employers and occupations drew a hostile response Thursday from a House committee.

The requirement would apply to anyone who gives more than $50 to a candidate or a political committee. Under current law, such contributors must only report their names and addresses. People who give less than $50 don't have to report anything.

Rep. Jim Hansen, D-Boise, tried to sell the bill as a simple, relatively minor change that would conform Idaho's Sunshine Law with those of most other states. Federal candidates also must report their contributors' employers and occupations.

Hansen told the House State Affairs Committee that his bill would make it easier to tell if a company, union or other entity was "bundling" contributions – spreading out a single large contribution among many employees or members so it looked like several small contributions.

But legislators bristled at what they saw as the implication they were doing something wrong, and said their contributors' occupations weren't anybody else's business.

"I think this is useless in the state of Idaho," said Rep. Robbi King, R-Glenns Ferry.

"All you need to do to find out the employer of the people who donated to my campaign is go to the coffeeshop and have coffee."

According to a Sunshine Law report from the secretary of state's office, the 18 committee members received $190,432.18 in campaign contributions between Jan. 1, 1991 and Dec. 31, 1992.

According to a Times-News study of campaign finance reports last year, the 105 members of the Legislature spent more than $1.2 million on their 1992 election campaigns.

Hansen's bill was supported by the Idaho chapter of United We Stand America, the political reform group founded by Texas billionaire Ross Perot, and by Idahoans for Term Limits.

Platt Thompson, the head of United We Stand in Idaho, said the bill would provide voters with additional information to judge who is financing candidates' campaigns.

"It's not asking a lot of a contributor – just put down who you work for and what your association is," Thompson said.

But Rep. John Tippets, R-Benington, replied: "I wonder if you're trying to put a fix on Idaho for a New York or California problem."

"I guess I'm really dense, but I don't understand how this is going to help you," added Rep. JoAn Wood, R-Rigby.

Several committee members worried that the public or the press might misinterpret employer and occupation data.

Rep. June Judd, D-St. Maries, said her town is dominated by a single employer, Potlatch Corp.

Under Hansen's bill, she said, it might appear as though Potlatch was bundling contributions through its employees even if the donations were independent or linked some other way – a church group, for example.

But Thompson disagreed.

"If most of your contributors work at Potlatch and Potlatch is the primary employer in your town, I don't see how that would surprise anyone," he said.

Employer and occupation disclosure has wide public support, Thompson said, and if the Legislature kills Hansen's bill, United We Stand may run it as an initiative in 1996.

The Sunshine Law itself was enacted by initiative in 1974, after the Legislature voted down a campaign-finance law.

The committee will finish taking testimony on Hansen's bill Monday morning.

It also will consider his proposal to strictly limit campaign contributions.

That measure would permit candidates to accept contributions only from individuals within their electoral district, or within Idaho for statewide candidates.

Contributions would be capped at $200 per person for legislative and local candidates, $500 for statewide candidates.

Resident questions legality of hookup moratorium

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN – A city moratorium on new water hookups is illegal, some residents say, but it is necessary to protect city residents until a new water system is complete, officials say.

During the City Council meeting this week, local resident Leohn Urie challenged the legality of the city's moratorium, saying that it has continued for more than 120 days – since May of 1993 – and was issued orally by the City Council.

He asked that the city attorney be consulted to see if the moratorium is legal. And he asked the council to end the moratorium at once.

"You've never proven that it's necessary," he said. "It's going to avoid a lot of problems if you lift it and let us go back to business."

But Councilman Gary Grissom said the city water shortage has been documented, and the city cannot allow any new hookups until the new water system – now under construction – is in operation.

"Our hearts go out to everyone who doesn't have water," Grissom said. "But we can't give what we don't have. If we had the water, we'd be glad to give it to you."

City Superintendent Richard Scruggs said the moratorium is necessary to protect the people that already have water service. The two springs that provide water now are dropping every year and summertime shortages have increased, he said.

"The city has skated by," Scruggs said, explaining that there is no water to spare. "We don't have it, Leonn. It's not there."

Councilman Lyle Cornelison agreed, calling Potter Springs "a total joke." The city also has a water shortage for adequate fire protection, Cornelison said.

Urie said the moratorium has created great expense and emotional upheaval for one elderly woman, has hurt real estate business and stagnated growth, which would have added to the tax base.

Builder Steve Wilkins said spring water flows and city water useage have not been measured by engineers to prove the moratorium is necessary. Also, Wilkins said, every lot in town should be allowed to have a water hookup, regardless of the moratorium.

Interment will follow at the Shoshone Cemetery. Friends may call from 9 to 10 a.m. on Saturday at the church. Arrangements are under the direction of Demaray's Bergin Chapel in Shoshone.

Eden residents to vote on sewage bond

The Times-News

EDEN – City voters will be asked to approve Tuesday a $115,000 bond issue topartially fund an expansion of the waste treatment system. An application for a $228,000 Department of Commerce block grant will be submitted by March 17 to fund the balance of the $353,000 total cost.

Eden residents now pay $7 per month for sewer services. Paying off the bond over the next 20 years will cost an additional $5.65 per month for each household for a total monthly sewer bill of $12.56, City Clerk Edith Utt said.

"We need the lagoon regardless," Utt said. If the bond doesn't pass, the people of Eden still would have to pay for a new lagoon. But monthly payments of $23.04 without the bond issue, in addition to the present $7 monthly bill, would mean a total monthly bill of $30.04, she said.

The city waste is being held in an evaporation lagoon located on five acres owned by the city. The new lagoon, to be located next to the existing one, would be adequate to handle a 1 percent yearly population growth for the next 20 years, said Gary Burkett, engineer with EHM Engineers, Inc.

The lagoon now in use has been overflowing waste for about five years, he said.

The election will be at City Hall with polls open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Residents within the Eden city limits are eligible to vote, Utt said.

Albion school's fate still undetermined

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

Kempton

BOISE – The old Albion Normal School campus has been crumbling for decades. Now, state Rep. Jim Kempton wants to decide once and for all what to do with it.

Kempton, R-Albion, is sponsoring a bill to encourage creation of a new state park around the old campus, with the school buildings converted into a "field institute."

But if such a park is not created, Kempton says, the buildings should be demolished.

"If you can't use the buildings for beneficial use, then the buildings should be torn down," Kempton told the House Resources and Conservation Committee Thursday.

Albion Normal School was one of Idaho's two teacher-training schools. The schools were established as part of Idaho's admission to the Union, and a public land endowment fund was established for them.

But since the normal school closed in 1951 the campus has become something of a white elephant for Albion, a Cassia County town of 305 residents. Although the Idaho Historical Society has identified the site as a significant state historical resource, the old school buildings are slowly falling apart, raising the possibility of serious asbestos contamination.

The city – which bought the campus from the state for $10 in 1970 – can't afford to either renovate the site or tear it down, Kempton said.

A study by the Parks and Recreation Department outlined one possible future for the campus: as a field institute within a state park. Outside groups could use such an institute to study the campus' turn-of-the-century architecture, southern Idaho wildlife, or other topics.

If the city and the department can agree on such a park and the Legislature approves their plan, $55,000 would be set aside to help maintain it. The money would come from Idaho State University, which inherited Albion Normal School's share of the endowment fund.

If no such plan is approved, the bill encourages the Legislature to fund asbestos removal and demolition of "all campus buildings not of practical value to the city of Albion – that is to say, nearly all of them.

Kempton called his proposal a "fish or cut bait" measure. House Majority Leader Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, agreed.

"I do believe that when the state sold this facility to the city of Albion, they found themselves a pigeon, and that isn't right," Newcomb said. "I really think the state ought to take responsibility."

The committee unanimously agreed to send Kempton's bill out to the full House for a vote, probably sometime next week.

RUPERT – A 14-year-old boy will be charged as an adult on drug charges, a magistrate judge ruled in a preliminary hearing Thursday.

Tracy Hitt, a West Minico Junior High student, could face up to life imprisonment and $25,000 in fines on a charge of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver within 1,000 feet of a school.

Hitt's lawyer, Bill Manning, had argued that the state didn't have enough evidence to prosecute Hitt for the intent to sell the drugs, which is a more serious crime.

"I don't think he needs to face a charge with a maximum life imprisonment," Manning said.

But Magistrate Larry Duff ruled that adult criminal charges are appropriate, saying there is sufficient evidence indicating Hitt may have been trying to sell drugs in the school.

"The legislature has decided this is a very serious matter if it's on school property," Duff said.

During Thursday's pre-trial testimony, one of Hitt's schoolmates, Dustin Hall, 14, said he remembered writing in a police statement that Hitt offered to sell him some "stuff" in the school hallway Jan. 18.

But whether Hitt actually offered to sell something, Hall couldn't remember on the witness stand Thursday. Hall said Hitt never showed him what the "stuff" was.

School teacher Wendy Merritt testified that she was suspicious of the two boys and approached them. When she asked Hitt what he was doing, he told her he was "making a deal," then laughed.

Principal Gary Stears testified that he approached the three and asked Hitt to empty his pockets. Hitt revealed three tablets of Ritalin – a prescription drug used to treat hyperactivity in children.

Hitt told Stears he didn't know it was illegal to have Ritalin, Stears said. Hitt said he was going to take the pills himself, Stears said.

Spud packer may expand to Burley

By Alice Sherman Hansen
Times-News writer

RUPERT – A Rupert fresh-pack potato operation is considering expanding by buying a former Del Monte vegetable cannery west of Burley.

"We've entered into an agreement to purchase the property under certain conditions," said Dennis Herbold, president of Max Herbold Inc.

Herbold said the purchase is still "tentative," and will depend on the outcome of economic and environmental investigations now under way.

"There is a good chance we'll use that property to continue the potato end of our business," Herbold said.

The company's Rupert fresh-pack spud plant will remain in full operation whether or not the additional facility is purchased, he said.

Herbold said he is still considering what function the Del Monte plant would serve, but as of Thursday remained undecided.

Del Monte closed the vegetable processing plant last summer as part of a consolidation plan. The company is selling some of the canning equipment and moving the rest to other plants. The facility was built in 1968, Herbold said.

Part of what made the property attractive was its self-contained water supply including a water tower and adjacent farm ground, Herbold said.

The 127-acre parcel is located on Highway 30 between the Coors barley elevator and Ore-Ida Foods processing plants.

Max Herbold Inc. was launched in 1945 by Dennis' Herbold's father, for whom the company is named.

Senate defeats supermajority for tax hikes

BOISE (AP) — The Senate late Thursday overwhelmingly rejected a proposed constitutional amendment requiring a 60 percent supermajority to approve any future increases in state tax rates.

The proposal, which required a 67 percent majority for passage, was opposed by 60 percent of the Senate. The final vote against it was 21-14.

The entire Republican leadership, four committee chairmen and all 12 Democrats joined Schroeder in refusing to submit the proposal to voters in November. Two weeks ago, it cleared the House with only four Democrats dissenting.

The proposal that Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus called bad public policy and that some Republicans referred to as little more than political gimmickry would have required 60 percent of all the members of each house to approve any rate increase in the sales, income or franchise taxes. Those rates can now be increased by a simple majority.

It was sponsored by freshman Republican Rep. Sylvia McKeeth of Boise, who maintained that even though the last state tax rate increase was in 1987, the public was demanding action from lawmakers to protect them from government growth.

Ten other states already require supermajorities — three at 60 percent, five at 67 percent and two at 75 percent.

But recent polls have shown that the real public frustration is with the local property tax and with federal taxes. In fact, one showed that state government was the only level for which public trust has increased in the past year.

And the amendment would not have affected the Legislature's ability by simple majority to extend taxes to currently untaxed areas. The extension of the sales tax to exempt transactions is the approach most analysts believe will be used the next time state officials believe more revenue must be generated.

Senate supporters of the proposal, however, contended it would help slow the growth in state government.

Republican Jerry Thorne of Nampa cited the narrow 1965 vote to enact the sales tax as a good reason for the supermajority rule. He claimed the only reason the tax was originally enacted was because the public was told all the revenue would go to schools when it now is being spent on all government operations.

Tax Commission figures showed, however, that the sales tax revenues to the state in the last full budget year totaled less than $403 million while public schools alone received $502 million in state aid.

Amendment opponents argued that the restraint the Legislature has shown over the last seven years when no general tax increases have been approved and in fact many special interest tax breaks have been enacted proved the Legislature has acted responsibly under simple majority rule.

"The Legislature needs that flexibility and deserves that flexibility, especially when the responsibility has been demonstrated," Republican John Hansen of Idaho Falls said.

Roll call

BOISE (AP) — Here is the 21-14 vote by which the Senate on Thursday rejected a proposed constitutional amendment requiring a 60 percent legislative supermajority to approve tax rate increases.

Republicans for (14) — Bunderson, Childers, Frasure, Furness, D. Hansen, Hawkins, Ingram, Ipsen, Madsen, Parry, Richardson, Ricks, Sorensen and Thorne.

Democrats for — None.

Dog searches for Lewiston fire clues

LEWISTON (AP) — Investigators borrowed a Labrador retriever from the Portland, Ore., fire department to help search for clues Thursday in a blaze that destroyed part of Lewiston's historic district.

Investigators were using the dog, along with other equipment, to try to determine if an accelerant was used to start the fire early Tuesday.

"The dog alerted on a couple of areas," said Jim Adamcik, a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

But the rubble from the Weisgerber, Beach and Adams buildings makes searching for evidence difficult, he said.

"We have to kind of take layer by layer off here. So we'll use the dog continually as we go through these different layers of the building," Adamcik said.

Boise Cascade workers threaten walkout

BOISE (AP) — Boise Cascade Corp. faces a growing prospect of labor problems at its Northwest paper and lumber mills.

Management and workers at the Boise-based company's five union-ized paper mills have yet to reach a new agreement almost a year after labor contracts expired. And contracts at Boise Cascade lumber mills in Idaho, Oregon and Washington will start running out in a few months.

The situation at the paper mills has dragged on so long that Farris Bryson, president of the Association of Western Pulp and Paper Workers, said Wednesday that union members may soon walk off their jobs.

"The company is playing hardball. We don't like that," Bryson said.

Boise Cascade lost $77 million in 1993, mainly because of weak prices for paper products. It was the company's third year of annual losses.

But officials contend the financial situation has nothing to do with the company's bargaining position.

Spokesman Andy Drysdale said the snag in paper-side negotiations is because Boise Cascade wants to bring its Northwest labor contracts into line with those it has elsewhere in the country.

Discussions have not even begun with lumber mill workers.

Welfare budget set; needy still lack health coverage

BOISE (AP) — The legislative budget committee on Thursday agreed on a $453 million state welfare budget that analysts said would come close to accommodating the growing number of public assistance recipients.

But the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee left unresolved the dispute between Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus and the Republican legislative majority over extending Medicaid benefits to the working poor in Idaho.

1994 Idaho Legislature

Andrus has demanded the GOP make good on its 1991 agreement to finance the so-called Medically Needy program. And he has vetoed Republican proposals to shift the multimillion-dollar annual bill for indigent catastrophic medical bills from the counties to the state.

The governor, who has scaled back his Medically Needy proposal, was reviewing several GOP-generated options for ending the impasse. And budget writers agreed to remove that dispute from consideration of the rest of the welfare budget.

"At this point," Andrus said late Thursday, "no acceptable resolution has been offered by either side."

The welfare package put together by the committee adopted the administration proposal to charge parents for part of the care provided their severely impaired children who receive life-sustaining services at home instead of in institutions. That sliding-scale fee based on income was expected to reduce the taxpayer cost of those services by $600,000 a year.

The committee also agreed to double the manpower the state has committed to collecting payments from health care providers who should have covered medical bills instead of Medicaid. That unit collected $11.6 million last year and is expected to collect nearly $17 million this year.

But while increasing the cash designated for welfare and Medicaid payments, the committee majority stopped short of meeting the Andrus recommendations, which had already been pared from the Health and Welfare Department's projections. The committee reduced the money for Medicaid by $1 million from the governor's recommendation. About a third of that comes from general state tax receipts.

Administration analyst Gary Felt said the growth in the Medicaid caseload appears to be slowing. But he said the department's original estimates have traditionally been very accurate, and that would translate into the need to add another $2.5 million to the budget next week.

"I don't think we're going to see any decrease in growth," Felt said. "It's not going to flatten out."

About 82,000 people currently receive the state-federal subsidized health benefits.

Tough sell finding water for salmon

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Federal officials are shopping for water to help flush migrating salmon to the Pacific Ocean. So far they haven't found any willing sellers in the Upper Snake River Valley.

Irrigators from Ashton to Twin Falls are waiting to see what spring weather brings before they lease water to the Bureau of Reclamation to aid threatened and endangered Idaho salmon migrate to the Pacific Ocean.

"It's probably a little early to tell," said Alan Skaar, superintendent of the Progressive Irrigation District in Idaho Falls.

Skaar said if all reservoirs fill and there's ample spring runoff, irrigators will have water to spare to help young salmon migrate to the ocean this summer. If spring rains are scarce, fish will have to rely on other water supplies the agency controls.

To date, only 550 acre-feet of water has been put in a rental pool administered by irrigators. Farmers, who get first priority, have requested 17,000 acre-feet.

An acre-foot of water is roughly the amount necessary to flood an acre to a depth of one foot.

"If we get rains like we did a year ago, then there will be water available" for salmon-flush, said Dale Rockwood, Idaho Falls farmer and rental-pool chairman.

Reservoirs in the Upper Snake are as full at this time of year as they have been in decades. The reservoir system, which includes American Falls, Palisades and Jackson Lake, was 89 percent of capacity on Wednesday.

American Falls is scheduled to fill later this month and Palisades is expected to be full in early April.

Ririe Reservoir, 56 percent of capacity, may be the only reservoir in the region that doesn't fill this year. Water in Ririe was released last summer for salmon flush.

The Bureau of Reclamation is seeking 500,000 acre-feet of water from Idaho reservoirs to aid migrating salmon.

Most will come from the Upper Snake.

Property-tax relief bill to resurface next week

BOISE (AP) — After some "tweaking," a new version of the Legislature's property tax bill will surface next week, and sponsors are hopeful they will be able to meet objections voiced in hearings.

A coalition of five lawmakers is behind a bill attempting to cut property taxes by $127 million statewide by shifting much of the burden to sales taxes.

The sponsors of the major property tax bill of the session hold out the prospect that many people will see a 20 percent reduction in property tax.

Rep. Golden Linford, R-Rexburg, said the subcommittee he heads will rewrite the legislation the first part of the week and then present a new proposal to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

Chairman Steve Antone, R-Rupert is expected to call a hearing before the full committee and, if there is enough support, the new version could be sent to a vote of the full House by the end of next week.

Linford and Rep. Wally Wright, D-Bayview, said it was a matter of "tweaking" the bill to meet objections. But they said the complaints that have surfaced so far are relatively minor and can be worked out.

A third hearing was scheduled Thursday afternoon.

Wednesday's Statehouse hearing went into early evening, with more objections surfacing to a 38-page bill with many tax changes. The chief feature of the bill is elimination of local school property taxes for maintenance and operation and imposition of the 5 percent Idaho sales tax on services that now are exempt.

Mom going to jail for mooning bus driver

BLACKFOOT (AP) — A 38-year-old Moreland woman has been fined $100 and sentenced to 48 hours in jail for mooning a Snake River School District bus driver in front of 11 students.

Jackie Gheen had pleaded guilty to battery and disturbing the peace in the Jan. 7 incident.

Gheen confronted driver Trish Gerber at a bus stop about refusing to let her son ride on that bus. The child, who had reportedly been misbehaving, had been allowed to ride on another bus.

Police said Gheen screamed at Gerber, threw rocks at her and then mooned her.

A month later, the school board declared that riding school buses was a privilege that can be denied any student for cause.

Grand jury indicted 9 defendants too late

BOISE (AP) — The Ada County grand jury that indicted Jeffrey Dalling after its term had expired also indicted eight other defendants.

The technicality resulted in a sexual abuse charge against the Meridian High School teacher being dropped.

"I'm not aware of this issue coming up in our district before," 4th District Court Judge Deborah Bail said. "It's appalling."

Legal officials had mixed opinions on what the mistake means in the other eight cases.

A week ago Bail dismissed the case of Dalling, who was charged with having "manual/genital contact" with a 15-year-old female student in 1985.

The statute of limitations for filing a felony case involving a minor is five years after the 18th birthday. Because the victim in the Dalling case is now 23 years old, the charge cannot be refiled.

The grand jury's six-month term expired April 13. But it met two more times, indicting four defendants on April 22, and Dalling and four others on May 6.

Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower said each of the cases is being reviewed by his office.

"The error with regard to (the Dalling) case was fatal," Bower said. "We believe that those cases that have been disposed of by pleas and or jury trial aren't a problem, that they're protected."

Bower said his office also is analyzing the grand jury mistake.

Grand juries, which operate in secret, investigate crimes and hand down charges.

They meet periodically during their tenures, which range up to six months before a new grand jury is chosen.

Deputy Attorney General Mike Kane said he didn't know of any Idaho law that dealt specifically with expired grand juries.

In the case of Boisean Timothy Davis Neil, who was indicted by the grand jury on April 22, the statute of limitations has passed.

The former McKinley Elementary School principal was found guilty on two counts of misdemeanor battery.

Neil's attorney, David Manweiler, would not say whether his client intends to use the technicality to fight the convictions.

"I think it's something you have to look at, absolutely," Manweiler said.

Boy Scouts may give up their can recycling

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) — Boy Scouts, a group which prides itself on kindness to the land, might give up can recycling in northern Idaho because of federal laws.

Scout leader Clifford Crismore said he has been warned that recycled cans, which are often shipped across state lines, might trigger federal labor laws that could be more trouble than the recycling is worth.

To avoid the hassle, the camp Crismore directs would simply dump the cans in the garbage, he said.

If the group does fall under federal regulations, Crismore figures camp costs will go up. It now costs $125 to attend camp for a week. That could climb to $250 or beyond, he said.

Crismore, who is senior district executive director for the Inland Northwest Council, said an Idaho Department of Labor employee warned him of the problem in February.

"I'm going to have to stand up and tell all those wonderful scout leaders about this," he said.

Federal laws would apparently frown on 14-year-olds being hired and trained to join the camp as staff members, Crismore said.

Gary Puckett's rock 'n' roll roots stretch to Twin Falls High School were he played in bands and then graduated in 1960.

Gary Puckett retains his roots, yet moves on

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

JACKPOT – From the corridors of Twin Falls High School to worldwide fame and fortune, Gary Puckett's life has been anything but dull.

Just since he performed here two years ago, Puckett has crisscrossed the United States with his music and has taken his show on the road to Australia. He also got married – to a glassblower who also works in acrylic arts. Someday, he said, he may have those children he never had.

Puckett, now 51, was talking about his life in a Thursday phone interview between shows at Cactus Petes.

His rock 'n' roll roots are still in Twin Falls, where he played in his first high school bands, but he has no relatives left in town and seldom visits the area. A second cousin, John Peterson, is the resident pro at the Jerome Country Club, and Peterson will be making the trip to Jackpot to see Puckett perform.

Puckett graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1960. In the next eight years, he and his Union Gap band had six consecutive gold records, and in 1968 they sold more records in America than the Beatles.

Favorites such as "Young Girl," "Woman Woman," "This Girl is a Woman Now" and "Lady Willpower" skyrocketed the Gap, dressed in 19th century U.S. cavalry uniforms and playing ballads of young love won and lost, to dizzying heights. Appearances on TV shows with Ed Sullivan and Johnny Carson soon followed.

But, along the way, an exhausting pace coupled with creative differences with CBS

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

BUHL – There are certain things you expect of a visit to a farm implement dealer. Del Wuebbenhorst knows. He used to be one.

You should get a cup of coffee, a new John Deere hat and the chance to kick the tires of a shiny vehicle that costs more than your daddy's first house.

"I've got 925 of 'em, all together," Wuebbenhorst said. "We added on to the garage to have a place to put them, but we've run out of room out there too."

Wuebbenhorst collects farm toys – not the cardboard silos, plastic fences and rubber roosters you found under your Christmas tree when you were a kid, but miniaturized versions of the real thing.

Well, almost the real thing.

"A lot of them are authentic down to the sparkplug wires and the radiator caps," said Jerry Cowger, a 37-year-old Filer farmer and an avid collector. "And a lot of people add the details themselves."

Cowger and Wuebbenhorst will be among several hundred collectors, wannabes and gawkers on hand at the third annual Farm Toy Fair Saturday at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer. What started as a sideshow to the Filer Bean Festival has turned into a major event in the arcane mail-order-and-garage-sale world of farm toy collecting.

"It surprises me how many people in this area show up for something like this," Cowger said. "Especially in the west end of the county and on the Northside, there are a lot of people interested in toy tractors."

Most, like Cowger and Wuebbenhorst, grew up around tractors, balers, combines and fillers and love old farm machinery. Both men have restored the big machines and are working on others.

"But collecting toy tractors is a lot cheaper and takes less time than restoring the real thing," Cowger said. "Takes up a lot less space too."

"I've done around 30 of the big ones," Wuebbenhorst said. "Finally ran out of room."

Most farm toys are die-cast or made of aluminum and plastic and sold by farm-implement dealers or by toy and hobby stores in major metropolitan areas. They're relatively rare in small-town toy stores and in discount and department stores, so a fair percentage of the trade goes on in classified ads in the pages of Toy Farmer magazine, through the mail by collectors, at yard sales, and at toy shows like the one in Filer this weekend.

Ertl Inc., the toymaker and scale-model figure manufacturer, dominates the market, although there are a half dozen other companies that also make collectibles is sizes ranges from 1/123 scale to 1/16 scale.

"And if you don't find the rig the want, you can always make you own," Wuebbenhorst said.

"I don't pay any attention to scale; I just try to make 'em look real," Wuebbenhorst said.

"You can buy parts and decals to restore or detail a toy," Cowger said. "But a lot of people buy farm toys to keep them on the shelf because a farm toy in mint condition can be worth a lot of money. A farm toy in mint condition that's still in the box can be worth even more."

Antique farm toys have always been valuable, but they're becoming more expensive on the front end as well. Brand-new $100 rigs in the large scales aren't unusual, although in the most popular scale – 1/64 – retail prices range from $2 to $11.

"It's a hobby that takes a little money to get into if you're serious about it," Wuebbenhorst said. "But there are a lot of people to trade with."

Tractors and trucks dominate the hobby, but it's possible to find models of even obscure pieces of equipment – much of which hasn't been manufactured as the real things for years.

Toy show set Saturday

The show is set to run from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Merchants Building No. 1 at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children ages 8 to 12. Kids' under 8 will be admitted free.

Early floor admission is $5 per person regardless of age. Early admission is from 4 to 9 p.m. Friday and 7:30 to 10 a.m. Saturday.

Anyone with farm toys is welcome to show, sell or trade items. Trophies will be awarded for best of show and people's choice. Door prizes will be given and a grand prize drawing will be held.

Proceeds will go to the Filer Kiwanis youth projects.

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – According to the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, it's a "footstomping, whirlwind of authenticity ... and the audience cried out for more." When the Hungarian State Folk Ensemble performs in Twin Falls this weekend, Magic Valley audiences will be able to join in the fun.

The 72 performers who travel under the Hungarian State Folk Ensemble banner include high-energy dancers, a critically acclaimed chorus and a "show-stopping" orchestra, complete with gypsy violins, Hungarian cimbaloms and other ethnic instruments.

"The gypsy orchestra will perform several pieces on stage and will also provide the backup music for the dance ensemble," said Chuck Lambertz, Columbia Artists manager for the current tour. "It's family entertainment for all ages, and it'll very colorful. I even took my 1- and 3-year-olds to see it, and they sat through the whole thing."

Folk music that inspired Bela Bartok, Zoltan Kodaly and Franz Liszt is the foundation for the ensemble's melodies. Some of the music was written in the last century and made famous by gypsy orchestras. In addition, Hungarians in isolated villages have introduced their own folk music into the current culture.

What's new in toys? Same old story

The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Barney and the inhabitants of Jurassic Park had better look for a large rock to take cover. Another cutesy purple dinosaur is ready to thrust himself into the grabby hands of America's children. Dino of Bedrock and the whole Flintstone family — including a Fred doll that yells "Wilma" — is coming to a store and movie theater near you.

Yabba Dabba Doo.

Toyland is still in the Stone Age, thanks to the power of licensing, which allows toymakers to cash in on the heroes of pop culture and the movie industry to cash in on consumer spending.

"Our industry has been driven by licensing — movies and TV shows — for about 15 years," says Stephen Sandberg, a toy distributor from Foxboro, Mass., who was among those attending the American International Toy Fair here recently.

The phenomenon has reached such critical mass that Fairchild Publications this month launched a magazine, Index, to cover the licensing industry. "Everything drives each other," says Larry Carlat, editor and publisher. "The movie drives the products and a well-planned and integrated marketing approach helps drive the movie."

Growing up in today's interactive media environment, a child's view increasingly is shaped by the faces he or she sees on television, at the movies or on video. That's why the hottest toys of the moment so often are spinoffs of those familiar characters.

Whether parents approve of all the cartoons, videos, video games, comic books or movies their children are taking in, they can't control the flow of images that pop out of billboards, school supplies or even McDonalds' Happy Meals.

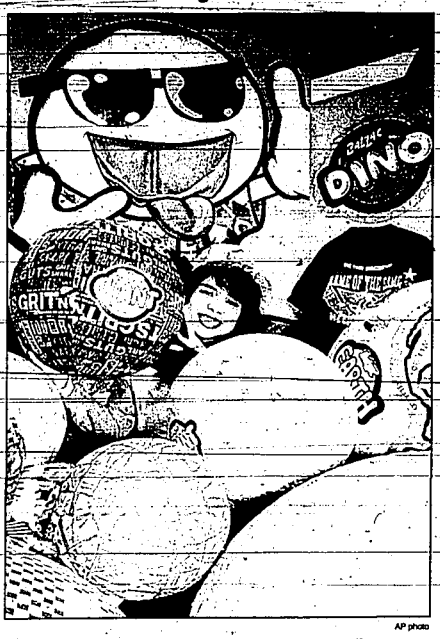

At the 10-day trade show, 22,000 retail buyers looked at more than 120,000 toys that will find their way onto store shelves sometime this year. Retail sales of toys were relatively flat in 1993, growing by only 1.6 percent to $17.5 billion, according to Toy Manufacturers of America, the industry's major trade association.

So a number of big-name toymakers looked eagerly to Hollywood for help in this highly competitive business.

"There are lots of classic toys that sell, year in and year out," says Wayne Charness, Hasbro's vice president of corporate communications, ticking off classics like Mr. Potato Head, Tinkertoys, and G.I. Joe. "But licensing is what comes in and helps you with a new toy."

"The Flintstones," the film being produced by Steven Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment and distributed by Universal Pictures, will kick off the summer movie season. It is scheduled to open on Memorial Day weekend.

Based on the 30-minute animated Hanna-Barbera TV show that premiered in 1960 — the first prime time animated series — the film stars John Goodman as Fred Flintstone, Rick Moranis as Barney Rubble and Elizabeth Taylor, who makes an appearance as Fred's mother-in-law.

Mary Rodas, 18, vice president of Catco Inc., a $70-million-a-year toymaker, is paid $200,000 a year to, basically, play with toys.

More than 50 domestic licensees are already stamping out a thousand Flintstones products, from boys' underwear to sunglasses to lunch boxes with bone-shaped handles. The toy company Mattel has created action figures of the Flintstone and Rubble families, stuffed dolls and a toy version of the Flintstones' car, the Flintmobile. One of the keys to the Flintstones' potential for success, is the nostalgia factor, which is expected to play heavily in the childhood memories of cash-rich baby boomers who have kids.

Mattel spin doctors say interest in the Flintstones spans the sexes. "The Flintstones appeals to both boys and girls," says Mark Dicamillo, director of marketing for boys' toys for Mattel, "so the toys have been designed that way too."

But Bedrock is not the only game in town. Other contenders in the 1994 licensing blitz include the Shadow, based on the 1940s radio serial about a mysterious crime stopper.

The Universal movie has spawned Kenner action figures of hero Lamont Cranston and the evil villain, Shiwan Khan, last descendant of Genghis Khan.

Disney's new full-length animated feature film, "The Lion King," due out in June, follows the life of a young lion cub, Simba, and his journey growing up to be king of the jungle. The film will feature the voices of such stars as Jeremy Irons, Matthew Broderick and Whoopi Goldberg and music by Elton John. Disney executives say merchandising plans for "The Lion King" are even bigger than those for "Aladdin." A major target: preschoolers who'll go for the scenes with baby Simba.

"The movie has a Bambi element to it," says Chuck Champlin of Disney consumer products. Look for things like "my first sleeping bag" with a lion theme. And plush cubs from Mattel and Lion King games from Milton Bradley.

"Stargate," an outer-space adventure flick starring Kurt Russell due out in August, is also in the fray. It has signed up more than 30 licensees to date. "It's a great movie for licensing," says Charness. "Good guys, bad buys and lots of hardware."

TV shows are also major players in the licensing game. In addition to cartoons, younger kids' shows like "Sesame Street," "Thomas the Tank Engine" and "Biker Mice" have many licensed products. A Fox Children's Network show fired up kids enough to make its Mighty Morphin Power Rangers one of the hottest toys of last year.

Playskool, Hasbro's infant and preschool division, says Talking Barney was the top selling toy overall in the entire $2.7 billion Hasbro company. More than 100,000 Talking Barneys were sold during Thanksgiving week alone. And this time Hasbro is offering Barney's Talking Phone and a talking version of his pal, Baby Bop. And there are Barney and Baby Bop Character Molds for Play-Doh.

Says Steven Aarons, an owner of toy stores in the Washington, D.C., area: "I thought the Play-Doh Barney would be great for adults. After the kids have gone to bed, they could throw the Barneys on the floor and stomp on them."

Gross toys of '94: Putrid in pink

The Washington Post

Toy manufacturers insist they're not promoting stereotypes, but for children beyond preschool, toys seem to be divided into two categories: gross or pink.

The role models for girls must be Ivana Trump or Dolly Parton on bad-hair days. For boys, life in toyland revolves around blasting macho action figures and adventures in creepy crypts and drippy caves.

"We've done research," says Lisa McKendall, Mattel Toys' manager of marketing communications. "Boys love yucky, icky, disgusting, slimy and scary. Girls love pretty and pink."

Kids may love this stuff. Or not.

• Dress & Dream Dress-Up Vanity. Fisher-Price describes its fold-up, three-panel vanity with makeup counter and stool as "an all-in-one play center combining vanity play and fantasy dress-up." $86.

• Dr. Dreadful Food Lab. Great for creating monster brains on a stick and other wiggly, jiggly creatures. Tyco makes a companion Drink Lab to concoct seriously putrid potions and foaming drinks. $25.

• Gorzak. A child's voice will activate this fierce monster from Tyco to move and attack. And kids age 5 and up can learn how a balde-ax works. $40.

• Incredible Edibles Gross-eries Maker Oven. Toymax makes it possible to create vile snacks with names such as Macaroni & Sleeze, Corn on the Slob and French Flies. $30.

• Shout 'n Shoot. A bad-boy water gun with a new twist. The voice-activated headset by CAP Toys fires a stream of water on command from a 24-ounce hip water tank. Described as "state-of-the-art water-weaponry." $25.

• Barbie's Dream Boat. Perfect for Barbie and her friends from Monte Carlo, this pink yacht by Mattel is about three feet long and includes a detachable pool and lounge chairs. It comes with a working blender for fruit drinks. $65.

Knight-Ridder News Service

Whatever happened to Richard Widmark? As girls, my friend and I enjoyed his movies. —Mrs. Carrie McCarthy, Colts Neck, N.J.

Then and now

STATS: Born Dec. 26, 1914 in Sunrise, Minn. Studied drama Lake Forrest (Ill.) College. Married college sweetheart Jean Hazelwood in 1942. She has one daughter.

IN EARLY YEARS: Widmark spent two years teaching drama at Lake Forrest before heading to New York. He went into radio, doing most of the top drama shows like "Inner Sanctum" and "Cavalcade." He made his Broadway debut in 1943 in "Kiss and Tell." After several more hit plays, he made his movie debut as killer Tommy Udo in "Kiss of Death" in 1947 and was nominated for a supporting actor Oscar. For the next few years, he fought to get out of being typed as a heavy. In 40 years, he made more than 70 movies.

FAMOUS FOR: His screen debut as Tommy Udo, the killer with the demented giggle who pushed a wheelchair-bound old woman downstairs.

IN RECENT YEARS: He continued making features through the late 1970s. He made his TV dramatic debut in 1971 in "Vanished" and was nominated for an Emmy. He appeared in "Madigan" from 1972-73. Since then he has done only occasional TV movies.

Sears Tower in Chicago still building champ

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: In a conversation with a friend, the question arose, "What is the world's tallest building?"

I told him, "The Sears Tower in Chicago."

He said there's a building in Toronto, Canada, with a revolving restaurant on top that's taller.

– A DAILY READER
IN DOWNEY, CALIF.

DEAR DAILY READER: You are; the world's tallest building is the Sears Tower in Chicago. It stands 1,454 feet tall and has 110 stories.

While researching the answer to your question, I discovered some fascinating facts about tall buildings and towers:

Other spectacularly tall buildings in the order of U.S. ranking are: the 110-story World Trade Center towers in New York, which stand 1,368 feet tall (North tower) and 1,362 feet tall (South tower); the Empire State Building in New York, which stands 1,250 feet tall and has 102 stories (build in 1929 – long before skyscrapers were commonplace); the Amoco Building in Chicago, 1,136 feet tall with 80 stories; and the John Hancock Center in Chicago, 1,127 feet tall with 100 stories. It's interesting that some of the shorter "tall" buildings have more floors than the next ranking buildings.

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading you for years, never dreaming that one day I would be writing to you for help with a problem of my own.

Here's the situation: I have fallen in love with my first cousin. (His mother and my mother were sisters.) We have been friends for years, but he lived in another state while we grew up. Also, we were both married and now we are divorced.

We need to know if there is a state that would allow us to marry. Please note, we do not intend to have any children. (I have already had my tubes cut.)

We would love to be together legally. Please help us find a state where we can make our dream come true. Thanks for any help you can give us.

– COUSINS IN LOVE

DEAR COUSINS: First cousins may marry in Alabama, Alaska, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, the District of Columbia and Virginia. And in Wisconsin, first cousins may marry if the woman is 55 years or older.

Good luck, and may you forever be kissin' cousins.

Knight-Ridder News Service

Video game of the week

Format: Sega Genesis

Price, manufacturer: $69.99, Electrobrain.

Recommended ages: 10 and up.

How the game works: Based on real competition karate matches and moves, you get to pick from a group of would-be champions. You can customize your fighter, select from over 55 possible moves and program your favorites into your own defined style. You can use your Genesis control pad or your body in conjunction with Sega's Activator.

You will fight over 16 opponents in two classes of tournament play as well as the dangerous and brutal Kumate (as in the film "Bloodsport").

Good points, bad points: Quick action and great sound effects make this the most realistic karate match since the film "Best of the Best." The game has a special code to enhance compatibility with the activator control pad, and with the video cassette recorder mode you can record and rewatch past rounds fought.

Tip: Don't jump right in to fight everyone; learn which button controls which moves, enter the training mode and practice, practice, practice. It's the only way to defeat the computer. Already available on SNES, NES and Game Boy.

The Verdict: The world of professional tournament karate awaits you. Bow, enjoy and begin!

At the moment, the apple of Cowger's eye is an articulating 4366 International 4-wheel drive, and he's closing in on it. When he finds it, he'll keep it in his lighted oak cabinet with dozens of other Deeres, I-H's and Masseys, much to the dismay of his two daughters.

Two toy farm rigs he remembers fondly from his own youth would each be worth hundreds of dollars today, Cowger figures.

"And I think my mother gave them to my cousins."

Author signs Idaho history book

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls native Leonard Arrington will sign copies of his new book, "The History of Idaho," Saturday from 2 to 4 p.m. at Waldenbooks in the Magic Valley Mall.

Arrington

Arrington, a retired Brigham Young University historian best known for his economic study of the Mormons, "The Great Basin Kingdom," wrote the two-volume history of the state on a commission from the Idaho Legislature. It was released last month by the University of Idaho Press.

The book is a comprehensive study of the culture, ecology, politics and religion of the state, and of the personalities that shaped it.

Arrington, the son of one of the early settlers of the Twin Falls Tract, was raised on a farm near Shoshone Falls, earned a bachelor's from the University of Idaho and a doctorate from the University of North Carolina. He taught at Utah State, UCLA and the University of Genoa in Italy, before moving on to BYU. He now lives in Salt Lake City.

The book sells for $45.

Nevada conductor leads concert

TWIN FALLS — Guest artist George Rosenberg, the founder, conductor and music director of the Northern Nevada Concert Orchestra, will conduct the Magic Valley Symphony in an evening of Slavonic music tonight.

The concert is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Building auditorium.

Tickets are $5 for general admission and $3 for senior citizens and students. They are available at Accents, the CSI Bookstore, The Music Center, Jan's Music Outlet, Welch's Music and Keith Jorgensen's in Twin Falls; West One Bank in Jerome; Welch's Music in Burley, Positive Way in Wendell or at the door.

Following the concert, everyone is invited to attend a reception honoring Rosenberg and the members of the symphony in the lobby of the Taylor Building on the CSI campus.

Historian slated for U of I dinner

TWIN FALLS — University of Idaho history professor Carlos Schwantes will talk about transportation, railroads and his new book when he speaks to the annual Silver and Gold Celebration Wednesday night at the Canyon Springs Inn.

The dinner is the yearly gathering of U of I alumni in the Magic Valley. It's scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Schwantes, who has a history of Idaho among his credits, is the author of "Railroad Signatures Across the Pacific Northwest," a new study of the role of transportation in the development of the region. He's now working on another history of earlier transportation developments in Idaho.

Holder of a doctorate from the University of Michigan, Schwantes has taught at the U of I for a decade and is considered an expert on Pacific Northwest history.

Tickets are $15, and can be reserved by phoning Roxie Simcoe at 733-5037 or 734-9486.

The dinner will be preceded by a cocktail hour at 6:30 p.m., and will include an auction to benefit the Magic Valley Scholarship Fund.

Ex-executive to speak in Burley

Kirk, a retired US West executive, now runs his own seminar company. He's also a published author.

Kirk will speak at 7 p.m. Admission is by membership only. Membership information can be obtained by phoning 436-4469.

'Annie' productions set this month

TWIN FALLS – The Magic Valley Dilettantes production of "Annie" is set for 7:30 p.m. March 18, 19, 20, 24, 25 and 26 in the auditorium at the College of Southern of Idaho.

Cost is $7 for adults and $6 for children under 12 and senior citizens. Cost for the matinee on March 20 is $5. Tickets are on sale now at the Magic Valley Mall.

Reception set at Ketchum gallery

KETCHUM – Gail Severn Gallery is currently hosting a show of watercolors by artists Carolyn Brady, Robert DeVoe, Kirk Lybecker and Joseph Raffael.

The exhibition opens today and continues through April 15 at the gallery, located at 620 Sun Valley Road. A reception for the artists is set for 6 to 9 p.m. today. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 4 p.m. Sunday. For more information, call 726-5079.

The event begins at 8 a.m. with 523 applicants in piano, voice and strings. Those who have received superior ratings at the festival can perform any time between 1 and 3:45 p.m. The 12 top performers will perform at the honors concert at 4 p.m., and awards will be presented at approximately 5:30 p.m.

Admission is free, and the public is invited. The club expresses its appreciation to the high school, the Methodist and LDS churches, the Burley Music Club and all who have donated to help make the festival a success.

Honors Concert set for church

The program will feature outstanding piano, vocal and instrumental performers from the club's annual music festival. Admission is free, and the public is invited.

Children perform Wednesday

TWIN FALLS – The Magic Valley Children's Choir will present a musical revue at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Welch Music Recital Hall in the Blue Lakes Mall.

Featured on the program will be movie and stage music, with solo selections as well as the choir's music. The choir is directed by Balthasar B. Buhidar and consists of children ages 8 to 12 from Twin Falls, Jerome and Hazelton.

Admission is free, and the public is invited.

The choir will also perform at 7 p.m. March 16 at Bridgeview Estates.

Symphony seeks young soloists

Contestants must be 21 years of age or younger at the time of the audition and be past or present students of Magic Valley schools (from Glenns Ferry to Cassia County and Jackpot, Nev., to Blaine County). The student's piece must be from 8 to 12 minutes long, have a symphony accompaniment and be memorized. If piano accompaniment is required, the student must bring his or her own pianist.

Up to three winners will be chosen for cash awards and the possibility of performing with the Magic Valley Symphony. Past winners will not be eligible on the same instrument.

Entry fee for the audition is $5. Applications should be turned in by May 3. For more information or to obtain an application, call Kevin Howard at 733-4452.

'Demolition Man' hits Twin Falls video stores

The Times-News

New videos

New movies this week in Twin Falls stores:

"Demolition Man" (Rated R) The future Los Angeles as seen in "Blade Runner" might resemble a parkland compared to the 1996 Los Angeles of "Demolition Man." The opening shot moves from the Hollywood sign in flames and peers down on a wrecked city ablaze with monstrous fires.

South-central L.A. is ruled by a murderous psycho named Simon Phoenix (Wesley Snipes) who won't even allow the U.S. mail to go through. When he captures a busload of people who enter his domain, only one man can rescue the hostages. That's John Spartan (Sylvester Stallone), a cop who adores danger. A fierce battle ends with Phoenix under arrest and Spartan accused of causing the hostages' deaths.

Both men are sentenced to the cryoPrison, where they are flash-frozen until parole time. (Such technology just three years from now?) Thirty-six years later they are thawed to battle anew.

They awake to a totally changed Los Angeles, which was leveled in the big earthquake of 2011. Now it is a sanitized city called San Angeles, stretching from San Diego to Santa Barbara. In 2032, the citizens lead semi-comatose lives. They are forbidden to have liquor, meat and salt, and are not allowed to swear or do other bad things. Transfer of bodily fluids is verboten, hence no kissing, no sex.

The lama-like Dr. Cocteau (Nigel Hawthorne) rules the megalopolis with a seemingly benign hand, but don't be fooled. Those who oppose his system are forced to exist in a hellish underground. "Demolition Man" is basically Rambo in the 21st century. The theatrics are the same, though enhanced by whimsical predictions of the future. Taco Bell is the only restaurant, having won the franchise wars. Jingles from 20th-century TV commercials are the most popular music. People speak with programmed politeness — "Enhance your calm."

Stallone does what he does best, employing every kind of weapon — fists, feet, lasers, cannons — to overcome incredible odds. His John Spartan is more sardonic than Rambo, but he kills just as deftly.

The fast-rising Snipes makes the perfect adversary. He revels in Simon's evil cruelty, laughing demonically with each atrocity. Some actors might have gone over the top; Snipes remains under control.

Sandra Bullock performs ably in the requisite female role as Spartan's police sidekick. Hawthorne conveys a smarmy presence as the mastermind of the future Los Angeles. "Demolition Man" marks the debut in feature films for director Marco Brambilla. His background in TV commercials is evident in the action — the quick cuts and close-ups resembling a Wile E. Coyote cartoon. (Associated Press) (Video West, Great American Video).

"Much Ado About Nothing" (PG-13) Sometimes maligned as befitting its title, "Much Ado About Nothing" emerges in Kenneth Branagh's movie as a joyful celebration of youth, romance and language. Acted to perfection by a British-American cast, it might be enjoyed by those who don't know a Leaf from a Corinthians.

Branagh brushed up his cinematic Shakespeare in an earthy "Henry V" that owes no apology to Laurence Olivier's 1944 classic. With "Much Ado," he strikes a lighter, even whimsical tone.

It's all played out in a sunswept Tuscany that matches the brilliance of the dialogue.

Branagh and Emma Thompson are ideally matched as the bickering Benedick and Beatrice, who are tricked into believing they are in love. Branagh seems looser and more playful than he has been on the screen before. The Academy Award-winning Thompson contributes her delicious wit and intelligence. Puckett

He resumed personal appearance touring in the '80s, when he was one of the founding members of the highly successful "Happy Together" oldies tour. That led to an invitation to tour with The Monkees.

Gary Puckett ca. 1960

Eventually, Puckett explained, he became a born-again Christian, and his philosophies toward most everything changed. Four years ago, he joined the Horizon Christian Fellowship near San Diego, where he now lives. The church is affiliated with numerous Calvary Chapel groups across the United States.

"The Lord wants to use my talents to get his word out," Puckett said. "I want to tell people about Jesus."

As a result, Puckett is writing Christian songs and is negotiating with Vineyard Ministries in California's Orange County to record a Christian album.

"I'm praying that it will take place," Puckett said.

But don't expect Gary Puckett to turn his back on the type of music that first gave him a career.

"I'll always sing the old hits, too," he said. "They've been very good to me."

Puckett's Jackpot show features both the oldies and the more recent hits from the '80s and '90s. He's in the process of recording an album, through a telemarketing project, that will include several songs from his live show along with 10 of the newer numbers. It's due out in May or June.

Meanwhile, he's spending his spare time at home with his wife, gardening, playing tennis and planning ski trips.

Maybe someday, when he has those children he talks about, he'll bring them back to see Twin Falls High.

Hungarians

The company's artistic director, Sandor Timar, has choreographed several dances that reflect the political changes in Eastern Europe, particularly the re-establishment of Hungary as a free nation after 40 years of Soviet rule. These dances symbolize both the mission of the ensemble, to preserve the true Hungarian folk culture, and the fact that the group is traveling to the United States for the first time from a free and democratic land.

Based in Budapest, the group was formed in 1951. The performers are coming to Twin Falls fresh off a sold-out performance at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. Proceeds from the sales of their videos, albums and T-shirts (available at their performances) go directly back to Hungary to support the group.

The theme of the ensemble's Twin Falls show is "I have left my beautiful country." It's designed to be nostalgic and to reflect the performers' ethnic backgrounds.

"There are many Hungarians in the United States, but all of us have left our beautiful countries at least through our ancestors," said Lambertz. "This show works for everyone."

AP/Bob Bianchini

NEW YORK (AP) — Don't be fooled: Those were the Grammys, not the Oscars.

The "Aladdin" soundtrack, which last year won two Academy Awards, took five Grammys Tuesday night. "A Whole New World (Aladdin's Theme)" won song of the year for composers Alan Menken and Tim Rice, while Peabo Bryson and Regina Belle were honored for their duet on the song.

And Whitney Houston, weeks after winning eight awards at the American Music Awards, won in three of the four categories she was nominated in at the Grammys — all for music for "The Bodyguard."

Houston won best pop female vocalist and record of the year for the single "I Will Always Love You," which she sang to open the Grammy telecast. "The Bodyguard" soundtrack won album of the year.

Houston's version of "I Will Always Love You" has sold more than 10 million copies. Composer Dolly Parton happily presented her with one Grammy. "When I wrote that song 22 years ago I had a heartache," Parton said. "But it's amazing how healing money can be."

In an evening of sentimentality, it was up to a young lion and an old one to inject some life — U2's Bono and Frank Sinatra.

Bono, seemingly baffled to pick up an alternative music Grammy for his band's "Zooropa" album, uttered an expletive in his acceptance speech. He returned minutes later with a poetic, stream-of-consciousness tribute to a choked-up Sinatra, who received a lifetime achievement award.

"He's the boss of bosses, the man, the big bang of pop," Bono said. "I'm not going to mess with him. Are you?"

Sinatra, his voice breaking after Bono's speech and the audience's standing ovation, recovered enough to joke that he needed a drink and to throw a dart at Dean Martin.

"This is more applause than Dean heard in his whole career," he said.

The speech ended abruptly for television viewers. According to Michael Greene, president of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, one of Sinatra's assistants, Susan Reynolds, was worried that Sinatra "would have talked for about an hour," and after a few minutes she asked CBS to cut to a commercial.

But today Reynolds said that's untrue. "The combined production teams were sensitive to the timing of the show," she said. "If he had been on there longer, the audience would have hung on every word."

After the break, program host Garry Shandling apologized. "Mr. Sinatra should have finished his speech. I think that was a slight mistake," he said.

Besides Sinatra, other recipients of lifetime achievement awards were Aretha Franklin, and the late jazz artist Bill Evans and pianist Arthur Rubinstein.

The academy also honored songwriter Curtis Mayfield, paralyzed four years ago when a lighting tower fell on him, with a performance by an all-star band that included Bonnie Raitt, Bruce Springsteen and B.B. King. "It's wonderful to know that a new generation of youngsters, many of whom were never even born when I was in my prime, are still listening to Curtis," Mayfield said backstage.

Sting, who had six nominations, won a best pop vocal performance award for "If I Ever Lose My Faith in You." He also won two technical awards for an album and video.

Some other multiple nominees — Billy Joel, Neil Young and R.E.M. — were shut out.

Soul Asylum, Aerosmith, Meat Loaf, Ozzy Osbourne and Stone Temple Pilots all won awards in rock categories.

Outside Radio City Music Hall, a group of protesters including Kim Gordon of Sonic Youth and members of the Breeders objected to elimination of a category for best female rock vocal performance.

Afterward, National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences President Michael Greene admitted it was a "huge hole in our process."

Soul singer Toni Braxton won best new artist and was the only singer to beat Miss Houston, in the category of best female rhythm and blues performance.

Country star Mary-Chapin Carpenter won two Grammys for her version of "Passionate Kisses." Dwight Yoakam won best country vocal performance by a male.

Rapper Dr. Dre won a Grammy for best rap solo performance, while jazz rappers Digable Planets won the best group rap award.

In the classical field, conductor Pierre Boulez's version of "Bartok: The Wooden Prince & Cantata Profana" won four Grammys. A box set of Billie Holiday recordings won three awards.

Country outlaws return

Los Angeles Times

Grammy voters gave a nod, however hesitant, toward the progressive camp of country with the top awards. In fact, in the wake of the honors heaped on the "Aladdin" soundtrack in major pop categories, the country results seemed almost radical.

Self-styled rebel Dwight Yoakam upset favorites Alan Jackson and Garth Brooks in the male vocal category, winning his first Grammy for "Ain't That Lonely Yet."

And to the musical question "Shouldn't I have all of this?" Grammy voters soundly answered yes to singer Mary-Chapin Carpenter and songwriter Lucinda Williams.

"Passionate Kisses," a bittersweet plea for everlasting romance and "pens that don't run out of ink," won Grammys for Williams and Carpenter as song of the year and female vocal of the year, respectively.

Williams, a long shot in the songwriters' competition, is a nouveau folkie and Nashville outsider compared to such well-established nominees as Kostas ("Ain't That Lonely Yet") and Alan Jackson ("Chattahoochee").

Likewise, Yoakam's music reflects his strong ties to the roots-rock community, and Carpenter came to country via folk-rock.

Were the vote for "Passionate Kisses" strictly a reflection of Grammy's traditional love of a winner — Carpenter has won the female vocal category three years straight now — the song award might as easily have been given to Carpenter's own nominated composition, "The Hard Way."

Voting in other major country categories was less adventuresome, with Brooks & Dunn getting the nod for duo or group vocal for their predictable, lick-the-hand-that-feeds-hit "Hard Workin' Man." And Reba McEntire won her second Grammy — her first came in 1986 — for her vocal collaboration with Linda Davis on "Does He Love You."

Paul McCartney: Still not dead

Rumors of famed Beatle's death preceded 'Abbey Road' album

Chicago Tribune

Rock beat

Chances are you know by now that 1994 marks the 30th anniversary of the Beatles' first appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show" and the beginning of Beatlemania in America.

But this year also marks the silver anniversary of another big buzz in Beatledom: the "Paul is dead" rumor.

For nearly two months in the fall of 1969, speculation ran rampant that Paul McCartney had been killed in a car wreck several years earlier and secretly replaced by a lookalike named Billy Shears. The remaining Beatles supposedly planted scores of clues about Paul's unfortunate demise in subsequent albums-in the album cover art, tucked away in lyrics or introduced via backward masking.

In the "Abbey Road" cover photo, for example, Paul was barefoot, reportedly the way corpses are buried in Italy; the license plate on a Volkswagen Beetle parked nearby read 28IF, meaning the singer would have been 28 if he had lived. On the "White Album," the song "Revolution 9," with its car crash sound effects, was purportedly a re-creation of Paul's accident. And some folks swore that if you played the song backward, you heard "Turn me on, dead man."

By the time McCartney turned up very much alive on the Nov. 7 cover of Life magazine and shut down the rumor mill, the phenomenon had been covered on network news and explored in more than 300 newspaper articles in the United States. But how did the rumor start?

In his new book, "Turn Me On, Dead Man: The Complete Story of the Paul Cartney Death Hoax," author Anru J. Reeve notes that rumors of McCartney's death in a car crash had surfaced in England in 1967 but died out when the British press found them to be false. He speculates that those rumors may have been revived in the United States by a Beatle-related song called "Saint Paul," recorded by a Detroit deejay named Terry Knight. Though hardly a hit, the song received airplay in Detroit five months before the rumors began in the United States.

However it started, the death rumor was fueled by articles in college newspapers. Reeve interviews several of the students involved (including Fred LaBour, now a member of cowboy band Riders in the Sky) and traces the rumors from college campuses to news wire services and the world at large. Seventy of the most popular "clues" are listed and discussed-or debunked in an illustrated 20-page appendix.

Books from Popular Culture Ink., a Michigan-based mail-order publisher (1-800-678-8828), are aimed at hard-core fans of rock 'n' roll; the emphasis is on information rather than stylishly written prose. "Turn Me On, Dead Man," is no exception, and the re-created conversations that appear throughout seem particularly silly. How can anyone recall what they said 25 years ago, especially when many of the discussions took place in dorm rooms hazy with marijuana smoke?

Nevertheless, this journey through the past should produce at least a twinge of nostalgia for anyone who spent hours — or days or weeks — combing "Abbey Road," the "White Album," "Magical Mystery Tour" and "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" for "clues."

McCartney, incidentally, recently had the last laugh. "Paul Is Live," his latest CD, features a cover photo similar to the one on "Abbey Road," but this time the singer is shod and walking his sheepdog. And the license plate on the Volkswagen Beetle in the picture reads 51 is — his age today.

George Strait: Country, pure and simple

New York Daily News

Country notes

He's eager for you to buy his records — but kindly leave him alone.

He's willing to do a gig every now and then — but get out of his way once it's over, 'cause it's head-on-the-head time and he's outta there.

George Strait is one of the mainstays on the charts — and a huge draw when you can get him up onstage. But he's also country's answer to Garbo.

He simply prefers his San Antonio home — the one that borders the ninth hole on the Old Dominion course. Or better yet, the open spaces of his 1,000-acre spread in Kingsville, Texas.

Remember Riata in the movie "Giant"? Well, think of Strait's place like that — bleak and desolate, flat and dry.

Come this Saturday night, Strait grudgingly will leave his shell to honky-tonk before 6,000 screaming fans at the Taj Mahal in Atlantic City.

"Easy Come, Easy Go" is his current hit — the latest in a string of Top 10 tunes that now numbers 25 (second only to the late Conway Twitty).

While he's now financially secure and able to be as independent as he has a mind to, Strait's beginnings were humble. Born in the blink-your-eye-and-miss-it town of Poteet, Texas, 42 years ago, his folks always valued their privacy.

The family eventually moved to the relatively bustling metropolis of Pearsall, and that's where young George met his wife, Norma. Shortly after graduating from high school, the future superstar grabbed Norma and made a mad dash across the border into Mexico, where they were married.

It wasn't until several weeks later that their little secret came out and there was hell to pay. But after the dust settled Norma's mother made sure that the kids were married properly in a church.

Strait's musical career didn't really get under way until after he'd served in the Army and begun to study at Southwest Texas State University (he holds a degree in agriculture). One day, George put up a sign on a bulletin board:

"Singer looking for a band."

Soon, he had teamed up with the "Ace in the Hole Band." With a few exceptions, they've been together ever since. "George is a very quiet guy, there's no denying it," said a close associate. "He only plays about 35 dates a year. We have to drag him — kicking and screaming — up to Nashville maybe twice a year to record."

Even movies hold little appeal for the reticent warbler. After the release of the well-received "Pure Country" in 1992, folks figured he'd go Hollywood on them. Not so.

Just ask publicist Nancy Kirkpatrick of Warner Brothers. The story goes that Kirkpatrick introduced herself to Strait by saying: "Hi, I'll be doing press for your new movie."

He simply smiled, extended his hand and responded: "Hi, I'm George Strait and I won't be doing press for my new movie."

Think what you might about the glamour of a country star's life, Strait doesn't fit the mold. His passions are simple. There's his family — which includes George Jr., 12, whom they call Bubba. There's his golf game. There's his rodeo riding (he's a steady competitor on the roping circuit). And, of course, there's his privacy.

Garbo would have loved him.

Sydney Omarr Horoscope

IF MARCH 4 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You were separated psychologically or actually from one or both parents at relatively early age. Many persons consider you a maverick, loose cannon. You are dynamic, inquisitive, capable of utilizing elements of timing, surprise. Before March is finished, significant domestic adjustment occurs, could include change of residence, marital status. During April, clandestine arrangements made six months ago will pay dividends.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Plans that originally appeared to lack substance are now regarded as substantial, workable. Views are vindicated, invitation to travel is imminent.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make inquiries concerning interest rates, tax and license requirements, possible inheritance. Gain indicated via written word — get it on paper! Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Attention revolves around home, family relationships, marital status, music, income potential. Aries will refuse to be "counted out."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent work methods, fitness, negotiations relating to property, future prospects. Real estate involved, define terms, refuse to be intimidated by termagant.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Relationship "heats up." If playing games, move on. Successful outcome depends upon organization, dedication, responsibility involves business and special appreciation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What was moribund is again alive and kicking — largely through your persistent efforts. Focus on distribution, display, import-export opportunities. Previous limitations no longer apply. Go for it!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Check Gemini message. Make fresh start — stress independence, originality, display of pioneering spirit. Different kind of love on horizon. Search for "secret document" involves Sagittarius.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Intuition on target — accent the unorthodox, refuse to be cajoled into going "off course." Message becomes crystal clear. Money will be released following initial delay. Excellent!

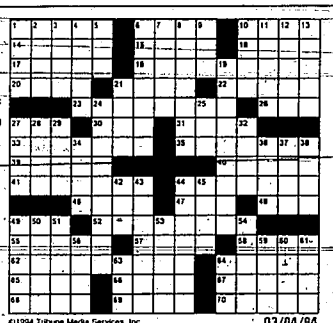

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cycle moves up, roadblock to progress removed. Individual who threatened will be history within 48 hours. Accent humor, good will, courage of convictions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Revise, review, rebuild on more suitable structure. Clandestine arrangement pays dividends involves Scorpio with three letters, initials in name: D, M, V.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get thoughts on paper, protect ideas, relish clash of ideas with Virgo, with these letters, initials in name: E, N, W. Mild flirtation could lead to "something significant." Respond accordingly!

By Jack Mathews
Newsday

Ethan Hawke, Winona Ryder, Janeane Garofalo and Steve Zahn play four recent college graduates facing hard facts about life and love in the '90s in the irreverent comedy "Reality Bites."

Beneath all the MTV and camcorder images, the pop references to 7-Eleven Big Gulps and Peter Frampton, the anxious dialogue about dead-end jobs and AIDS, and the obsession with '70s TV sitcoms, Ben Stiller's romantic comedy "Reality Bites" is a very old-fashioned and very predictable love story.

Movie review

The first script by 24-year-old Helen Childress, "Reality Bites" takes the timeless dilemma of a young woman having to choose between two very different kind of men — one ambitious, trustworthy, committed and rather dull, the other aimless, brooding and sexually exciting — and sets it among members of what the media have labeled Generation X. They're the fruit of the baby boomers, and the godchildren of the video revolution.

Lelaina Pierce (Winona Ryder), the valedictorian of her Houston college class, is almost literally tethered to the culture. She carries her camcorder like a third arm, intent on capturing the essence of her generation by doing a spontaneous documentary on the lives of her closest friends.

Her circle includes her spirited roommate, Vickie (Janeane Garofalo), a salesclerk at The Gap who, between one-night stands, frets over her latest AIDS test; their sexually inactive friend Sammy (Steve Zahn), who worries about breaking the news of his homosexuality to his mother; and Troy (Ethan Hawke), a high-IQ slacker and part-time rock musician who moves in with the two women after losing his job at a newsstand.

The romantic triangle that soon develops is between Lelaina, Troy and Lelaina's boyfriend, Michael (Stiller), a music-video executive who is determined to get her documentary (which looks like a very bad home movie to us) aired on his station's "In Your Face TV" show.

To their credit, Childress and Stiller, who is directing his first film, make Lelaina's choice less obvious than it would seem. Instead of being the kind of archetypal square who used to lose Ginger Rogers to Fred Astaire, Stiller makes Michael a good-hearted, if overanxious rival and you won't be alone if you end up rooting for him to come out the winner.

Hawke's character, the sarcastic, condescending rebel, is the only pure stereotype in the movie, and though his cruel edges are smoothed over in time, he never quite seems like anybody's idea of the catch of the day.

"Reality Bites" is a great star vehicle for Ryder. She is in nearly every scene, and is never uninteresting, even though the script often is. There is a long comic sequence in which Lelaina, having lost her job as a gofer for an egomaniacal day-time TV personality gets addicted to a call-in psychic and runs up a $400 telephone bill.

The movie is laced with situations contrived to demonstrate the characters' pop sensibilities, and the strain is often apparent. Childress wrote some hilarious lines, using references to Big Gulps, "The Brady Bunch" and "Melrose Place," but it's a disposable kind of humor that, seen even five years from now, may make "Reality Bites" look as dated as "Beach Blanket Bingo." Aimless 'twentysomethings' hottest thing on celluloid

Reel World

Heard this one before? A group of postcollegiate smart-alecks sits around making flip comments about the meaninglessness of life.

Aimlessly, they endure unfulfilling jobs while complaining about having no role models. There are no parental figures who can fathom them, either, so they are alternately coddled and accused of having no work ethic.

Welcome to the timeless world of the 23-year-old — reheated for a fresh generation in the movie "Reality Bites." Though packaged as a film very much about the here and now, it really describes a phase of young adulthood that has held sway for at least 40 years.

As written by Helen Childress and directed by Ben Stiller (themselves twentysomethings), "Reality" doesn't miss a Generation X cliche. Its characters take McJobs that are beneath them, go for AIDS tests and express mistrust of both '80s consumerism and '60s idealism.

They do everything but label themselves with that newly cliched tag of identity — slackers — even though every word from the lips of Ethan Hawke's character suggests the tag applies. With his artfully greased hair, wayward lifestyle and anarchic philosophy, Hawke's character automatically signals a "type" the media have been struggling to package during the last few years — the young person grappling for meaning in the age of grunge.

It's a type we've been seeing more onscreen lately, in "Singles," "Bodies, Rest & Motion" and, of course, "Slacker." The character even comes with a ready-made soundtrack, in the college rock of Pavement, Giant Sand or the Lemonheads.

But even if this type can be easily fingered, is there anything terribly new about it? AIDS, and the movie's automatic acceptance of gay characters, may be very '90s. But the film's essential character — the troubled young outsider — can be located just as easily in a '60s classic like "The Graduate" or in the '50s prototype of the form — James Dean in "Rebel Without a Cause."

In fact, the aimlessness of the characters in "Reality Bites" isn't so much a product of infomercials and escalating divorce rates (as the movie would have us believe), as it is of the leisure economy of post-World War II America.

The relatively cushy lifestyle sustained by American prosperity helped create this prolonged period of adolescent yearning, while hungry marketers were quick to see that each succeeding generation must be named anew — the better to be pitched products.

Ironically, the characters in "Reality Bites" would rather die than capitulate to such marketing. But only by corralling millions of diverse individuals into a coherent "generation" can this otherwise appealing little movie sell itself as significant. Which is why "Reality Bites" ultimately presents as inaccurate a view of modern youth as "St. Elmo's Fire" did of postcollege types in the '80s, when ambition allegedly defined a generation.

If indeed there is something new about "Reality Bites," it has less to do with its actual content than with its pop-culture references.

If nothing else, this is the first movie to present the TV sitcom "Good Times" as an object of nostalgia.

Bull-riding bio-pic flick falls flat

Los Angeles Times

Movies playing in the Twin Falls area this weekend. Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and reviews are by the Los Angeles Times.

Capsule reviews

"8 Seconds" (PG-13). Weak-kneed bio-pic about the late great bull-riding champ Lance Frost, played by Luke Perry (who looks more like Woody Guthrie here). Strictly for bull-riding fans. (Twin Cinema)

"Greedy" (PG-13). As a satire it's wildly uneven and heavy-handed, but it affords a wonderful major role for Kirk Douglas as wily old scrap metal tycoon whose overly caricatured relatives vie with each other for his favor. With Michael J. Fox, Nancy Travis and Olivia d'Abo as the film's likable, essentially decent types. (Twin Cinema)

"The Chase" (PG-13). Charlie Sheen finds himself on the run as a falsely convicted bank robber, so he grabs heiress Kristy Swanson just to be safe.

"Ace Ventura: Pet Detective" (PG-13). Every body movement and facial tic of Jim Carrey (of "In Living Color" fame) is so broadly exaggerated here, he makes goofy Jim Varney look like stole Charles Bronson by comparison. A movie centered around as manic a presence as Carrey's sounds like it could be hell, but his starring debut proves surprisingly capable of provoking unexpected giggle fits. The movie is uneven, but his cartoonish inhumanness is nearly heroic. (Twin Cinema)

"Blue Chips" (PG-13). Nick Nolte plays a college basketball coach who crosses the line into corruption. Not nearly all it should be, but full of glancing anecdotal moments that make you realize why you love sports — and sports movies — in the first place. Shaquille O'Neal plays a blue chip college prospect, and he towers over Nolte — no mean feat.

"The Getaway" (R). Roger Donaldson does a perfectly respectable job directing the holdups and shootouts, but the best reason to see this remake of the violent Sam Peckinpah film are Alec Baldwin and Kim Basinger standing in for Steve McQueen and Ali MacGraw as partners in love and crime. (Motor-Vu Drive-In)

"Grumpy Old Men" (PG-13). Walter Matthau and Jack Lemmon play a pair of long-time feuding friends who square off over the same woman (Ann-Margret). It's a cantankerous romp without much wit or point. (Twin Cinema, Ace Theatre)

"I'll Do Anything" Part romantic comedy, part skewering of Hollywood, part tribute to actors and part prickly father-daughter relationship, the first film by writer-director James L. Brooks in seven years is too many parts in search of a whole. Funny, well-acted (especially by Nick Nolte, Albert Brooks and newcomer Whitni Wright) and filled with laugh-out-loud moments though it is, it is a triumph of individual parts that falls short of overall satisfaction. (Ace Theatre)

"In the Name of the Father" (R). The crack creative team responsible for "My Left Foot" — director Jim Sheridan and star Daniel Day-Lewis — combine again for this crackling, politically charged melodrama based on the true story of an Irishman falsely accused of a murderous bombing. Besides steamrollering the audience with the power of polemical filmmaking, "Father" adds the emotional truth of a moving father-son relationship. (Twin Cinema)

"My Father, the Hero" (PG). Gerard Depardieu is enjoyable trying to get his mouth around the English language in this otherwise tepid farce about a 14-year-old on vacation with her dad (Depardieu) who pretends he's her lover to get a boy jealous. Smarmy premise. (Jerome Cinema)

"My Girl 2" (PG). Only for those who really enjoyed "My Girl." Anna Chlumsky is once again the adorable malcontent who, in this sequel, goes in search of the Mother She Never Knew. (Twin Cinema)

"On Deadly Ground" (R). Steven Seagal makes a lively if preachy directorial debut starring as an oil rigger who discovers his villainous employer (a deliciously nasty Michael Caine) is cutting corners to the extent of endangering the environment. He quite possibly will be reading audiences who never thought about the environment before. (Twin Cinema)

"The Piano" (R). Using Holly Hunter and Harvey Keitel in ways never seen before, writer-director Jane Campion has given a sweepingly romantic 19th-Century tale an almost avant-garde edge. Telling the story of Ada, a mute arranged bride who comes to primitive 1852 New Zealand with her piano and powerfully affects the lives of Keitel and Sam Neill, Campion shows herself to have a command of the visual and the emotional that is fearless and profound. Winner of two prizes at Cannes. (Mall Cinema)

"Tombstone" (R). Overlong Western about the Earps and the Clantons and the Gunfight at the O.K. Corral. Some stirring action but mostly aggressively unbelievable. Kurt Russell heads the cast as Wyatt Earp. Sam Elliott, Val Kilmer, Dana Delany, Powers Boothe and many others kick up the dust. (Motor-Vu Drive-in)

Retail sales rise in February

The Associated Press

Consumers encouraged by the improving economy finally decided it was all right to do some shopping in February, giving the nation's largest retailers generally good sales despite the dismal winter weather in much of the nation.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc., Sears, Roebuck and Co. and J.C. Penney Co. Inc. were among the chains that announced strong February sales gains Thursday. Clothing retailers saw early signs of revival after languishing through 1993.

"Sales have been very, very strong outside those markets" where the weather hampered business, said Jeffrey Edelman, an analyst with C.J. Lawrence Inc. But even in snowbound areas, sales picked up once the weather cleared, he said.

February marked the first time in months that the retail business overall reported largely good sales. Storeowners struggled before and during the Christmas shopping season, and many merchants — particularly clothing retailers — were disappointed.

Last month's results were another sign that the economy is strengthening. Sales reflected consumers' perception of a healthier economy and also indicated continued growth, since consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of economic activity.

The Salomon Brothers retail index, the investment firm's barometer of sales performance, rose 6.4 percent, the biggest monthly gain since December 1992. In January, the index rose 3.5 percent. In February 1993 it rose 0.8 percent.

Retailers in Southern California reported strong business, a partial reflection of how consumers were using government aid money to refurnish and fix up homes damaged during January's earthquake.

Wal-Mart, the nation's largest retailer, said sales from stores open at least a year rose 9 percent from last February, while total sales were up 25 percent.

Sales from stores open at least a year, known as same-store sales, are considered the most accurate measure of a retailer's strength.

They exclude the results of newer stores, where sales tend to be unusually high. Same-store sales also exclude results from stores closed over the past year.

Kmart Corp. did not fare as well, reporting same-store sales up 0.2 percent and overall business up 6.8 percent.

Rising rates pull stocks down

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks drifted to a mostly lower close Thursday, weighed down by rising rates.

Unlike Wednesday when stocks staged a stunning comeback, the market struggled unsuccessfully to fully recover from a bout of selling in the morning and most measures of stock performance ended the session with modest losses.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished with a deficit of 7.32 at 3,824.42 after improving from a loss of more than 20 points during the morning's selloff.

The NYSE composite fell 0.79 to 256.68 and the Standard & Poor's 500 index dropped 1.80 to 463.01.

The Nasdaq Stock Market composite gained 1.11 to 784.58, helped by strength in a range of computer and technology shares. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dipped 0.67 to 465.65.

Losers outnumbered gainers on the NYSE by about 5 to 4 and volume on the Big Board's floor eased to 291.79 million shares as of 4 p.m. EST. On Wednesday, a much heavier total of 361.12 million shares changed hands.

Sportsquote

"It's going to be a lot harder than he thinks it's going to be. If you get three hits out of every 10 times up, you fail seven times. If you hit .300 you are a superstar. If you are a basketball player and you shoot 30 percent, you don't have a job."

— Future Hall of Fame baseball star George Brett, in analyzing the chances of Michael Jordan playing major league baseball

King Video to air A-1, A-2 title games

TWIN FALLS – King Videocable announced Thursday that they will air the A-1 and A-2 state high school basketball championships live Saturday night, Mar. 5.

The two games can be seen at King 10, cable channel 10 beginning a 6 p.m. with the A-2 championship game.

There will be highlights of the A-3 and A-4 championship games following the A-2 championship. The A-1 contest will begin 30 minutes after the completion of the A-2 game.

Indiana State's Locke joins ranks of former coaches

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. – Tates Locke, head basketball coach at Indiana State University since 1989, was fired Thursday after a 4-22 season.

Locke's 1993-94 team was the school's worst in his five years. The Sycamores failed to reach the Missouri Valley Conference tournament field and finished tied for last in the 10-team league.

Bruins stay alive

BOISE – The 17 points Mountain Home standout Marcus Wallace scored in the second half did not decide the final Class A-1 first-round boys' state tournament game Thursday night.

But the Bruins advanced to the championship semifinals with a 55-52 victory over Mountain Home.

The other semifinal contest features Coeur d'Alene, which edged Hillcrest 51-50, and Borah, which topped Idaho Falls 69-55.

Twin Falls Senior Josh Amundson drew the defensive assignment on Wallace. While Amundson kept the best of the Tigers busy, the rest of the Bruins kept Mountain Home a one-man team.

"We just played them straight up," said Twin Falls coach Ben Allen. "I thought Josh did a good job. He's going to get his points, but we made him work. The big thing was we kept him off the boards.

"I thought our other kids did a great job on the rest of their kids."

Salt Lake ends CSI's season

By Larry Hovey

ST. GEORGE, Utah – College of Southern Idaho has a rich tradition of men's basketball.

Unfortunately, the bad one wound up being served Thursday afternoon when Salt Lake Community College knocked the Eagles out of the Region 18 junior college tournament 86-72.

Fourth-seeded Ricks, which won its opening game became the top seed as both No. 2 North Idaho and No. 1 Dixie joined CSI on the sidelines.

Utah Valley defeated the Cardinals and Eastern Utah knocked off nationally No. 2 Dixie 79–77 to complete the upsets.

It wasn't that this ended a string of eight-straight tournament titles for the Eagles. It is the CSI tradition that first-year coaches have to pay their dues.

The loss wasn't his fault, of course. The players helped considerably. And someone less charitable might suggest that the officiating wasn't consistent enough to have a positive effect on the game.

Nonetheless, Irons took it with the stated resolve of being better prepared next time around.

"It's real disappointing," he said. "We knew they (SLCC) were a good team. It's one thing to play hard and lose but when you play like we did, it's hard to swallow."

Irons, who ended with a solid 23-8 first-year record, paid homage to the CSI basketball traditions built under several coaches since 1967.

"It's one thing to talk about the tradition. But sooner or later, you (the team) has to buy into that," Irons said.

The Eagles killed themselves early with five missed close-in shots – including a couple of layins – and immediate foul trouble.

Salt Lake, playing its talented trio as defense demanded, jumped ahead quickly 15-5.

But CSI steadied as Trent Gardner contributed two 3s and with just over 10 minutes left in the half, the Eagles had trimmed the deficit to 21-19.

What seemed a good omen, however, wasn't to be. The Bruins reeled off

Feds review Harding role in attack

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – The Justice Department is reviewing whether any federal crimes were committed by figure skater Tonya Harding in the attack on rival Nancy Kerrigan.

"The review is still under way," John Russell, spokesman for the Justice Department's criminal division, said Thursday. He said the review was undertaken at the request, about two weeks ago, of local prosecutors in Portland, Ore., Harding's home.

Federal officials are studying whether Harding may have violated the Hobbs Act, which makes it a felony to interfere or conspire to interfere with commerce by use of violence or the threat of it, Russell said. The act carries a penalty of up to 20 years in prison.

Criminal division attorneys are "very skeptical" a Hobbs Act prosecution can be brought, according to a federal official, who declined to be identified. They have held that view throughout the FBI-assisted investigation of the Jan. 6 attack on Kerrigan, the official said.

On Jan. 20, FBI spokesman Bart Gori in Portland said no federal charges would be filed in the attack.

Kerrigan was struck above the right knee with a metal baton after practice in Detroit for the U.S. Figure Skating Championships. Harding won the championship in Kerrigan's absence.

A criminal investigation of Harding by a Multnomah County grand jury continues in Portland in an "orderly and professional" fashion, lead prosecutor Norm Frink said last week. The grand jury has been hearing testimony and gathering evidence for more than a month in the Kerrigan case.

Vets overcome weather in Doral-Royal Open

The Associated Press

MIAMI – Old pros Ray Floyd and Jim Thorpe mastered winds of 40 mph Thursday with a pair of 68s to share the first-round lead in the $1.4 million Doral-Ryder Open.

"I did the things you have to do in conditions like this," Floyd, 51, said after one-putting for par on nine holes and chipping in for par on another.

"I like it like this 'cause you don't expect to play good," said Thorpe, 45, a non-exempt player who got into this event as the last recipient of a sponsor's exemption.

Another golfing senior citizen — Jack Nicklaus — did not fare so well. He had two double bogeys and a triple bogey-6 in an embarassing 8-over-par 80 on Doral's Blue Monster course.

Even that looked good to Johnny Miller, however. Miller, 46, made a second foray from the television announcer's booth and found it much more difficult than his surprise victory last month in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

Miller was 9-over for the first nine holes and finished at 83 as afternoon winds proved even more difficult than the gusts encountered by Thorpe and Floyd.

Dick Mast, who had a 69 in the morning, was the only other golfer in the strongest field of the year to break 70. The group at 70 included David Edwards, Billy Andrade, Brad Bryant and John Huston. All played in the morning. Greg Norman opened defense of his title with a 71, while England's Nick Faldo began his American season with a 73. Fred Couples had a 74 and Nick Price, the 1993 Player of the Year, shot 75 in his first American start of the year.

Jordan error allows go-ahead run to score; Bucs beat Twins

The Associated Press

A couple of "Ks" and an "E" for Michael Jordan.

Baseball's most celebrated rookie took the field under game conditions for the first time since high school Thursday.

He went 0-for-3 with two strikeouts and an error in an intrasquad game for the Chicago White Sox. His team lost 12-7 after his two-out error allowed the go-ahead run to score.

"Some critics may see it as a setback, but I saw it as an opportunity to go out and see what a baseball game is like," Jordan said after playing all six innings.

"It was my first game and I felt nervous and out of my element. Hopefully, I'll get another chance and be a little more comfortable."

White Sox manager Gene Lamont said Jordan would not start Friday in the exhibition opener against Texas. But Lamont said Jordan is likely to play some right field.

More baseball – D4

He was in right field Thursday that Jordan had his worst moment. With two outs, two runners on and the score tied, Joe Hall sliced a high fly into the 25 mph gusts. Jordan, instructed to play deep, ran in and toward the line, but the ball glanced off his glove, a model specially made by Wilson with his name in it.

"That was one of those mistakes you don't want to happen because everybody is paying attention to you," he said.

In other games, Pittsburgh beat Minnesota 7-5, Atlanta downed the University of Georgia 10-5 and Kansas City defeated Central Florida 4-2. There were 14 games scheduled for Friday.

At Bradenton, Fla., Orlando Merced had a three-run homer and a two-run double and Alejandro Pena got a save in his return from a year-long absence.

Merced, the subject of off-season trade rumors, hit a three-run homer in the third inning off loser Keith Gamgozzo to give Pirates the lead for good at 4-2. He added a two-run double off Rick Aguilera in the fifth as the Pirates extended their lead to 6-3.

Pena, who missed last season after undergoing elbow surgery, retired Minnesota in order in the ninth, striking out two.

Murtaugh, Carey set up District 4 battle

Class A-4 tournament

CALDWELL – The Murtaugh Red Devils axed through the Council forest Thursday with a big 70-35 victory in the Idaho State Class A-4 boys basketball tournament.

The win for the Red Devils sets up the fourth meeting of the year with Carey, an earlier 66–59 winner over North Gem, at 8:30 p.m. and a shot at moving on to the championship contest.

It was the Red Devil defense that won this contest for Murtaugh as they held Council to 24 percent shooting from the field.

"We take pride in our defense," said Murtaugh Coach Craig Stanger. "If we play defense, our offense can take care of itself."

The offense did click Thursday with four Red Devils scoring in double figures. Chris Wright led all scorers with 13 points while Bryan Brown, Kirby Nebeker and Jared Rovig had a dozen apiece.

Murtaugh dominated the first quarter taking a 16-7 lead. The Red Devils hit about everything they put up. Rovig was especially tough popping in eight points Brown added four to push the advantage to nine points.

Nebeker and Dustin Moyes each had six points as the Red Devils boosted the halftime lead to 34-15 as they outscored the Lumberjacks by 10 points in the second quarter.

Free throws started to fall for the Red Devils in the third quarter. After missing three in the first half, Murtaugh rattled off eight in the third quarter and the lead was 48-24.

With the monkey off its back, Carey came back and won its opening game at Albertson College in Caldwell Thursday night.

The Panther victory put Carey in the winners bracket. It was not a place where they could be found last season where they overcame a first round loss and won the consolation title.

Through the first quarter and again midway through the fourth period, it looked as if Carey might be on the short end of the contest.

With two minutes to go in the contest, Justin Sant hit two free throws giving the Cowboys a 56-54 lead.

Carey missed three shots at the other end after North Gem took the lead, but a Cowboy foul sent Derrick Parke to the line for two shots and he made one cutting the Cowboy lead to a point.

Another Cowboy foul later sent Cameron Cook to the line where he gave Carey the lead for good 57-56.

Scott Wood added two more with 1:18 to go giving the Panthers a three point cushion and after Lyman Kirkland added a layin Carey had the game on ice.

"We missed maybe two shots down the stretch," said Carey Coach Lee Cook. "Foul shots win games."

"We were a lot tighter than I thought we would be," said Cook. "We thought we had to bring up the tempo and fast break them."

Tigers rally to meet top-ranked A-2 team

Class A-2 tournament

MERIDIAN – Jerome stung Bonners Ferry 22-5 in the fourth quarter Thursday night and advanced to the semifinals of the A-2 boys' state basketball tournament with a 64-48 victory.

The Tigers, now 14-10, have their work cut out for them in tonight's 8:30 game with 23-1 Sugar-Salem, 56-34 winners over Kuna. "I watched the Sugar-Salem film today. I probably shouldn't have," said Jerome Coach Brent Clark. "But we're probably going to slow it down tomorrow night with two people back all the time."

Going into the fourth quarter Thursday night, Jerome trailed 43-42, before a six-point scoring surge in an 85-second span started a 17-2 scoring run. That run was capped when guard John Perry canned two free throws with 1:17 left to make it 59-45.

The Badgers, 13-9, connected on only 2 of 16 fourth quarter shots, including 1-for-9 accuracy from three-point range.

"I think they lost their composure," Clark said of Bonners Ferry. "I think we did a good job defensively. I think if we'd have boxed out some more we would have done better."

The Tigers broke a full-court pressure defense at least twice in the run.

Senior center Chris Williams led Jerome with 17 points, and guard Aaron Bay had 12 as the only other Tiger in double figures. The Tigers trailed by as many as five points in the first half. They were down 27-22 when Kris Gravelle scored two of his 10 first-half points on a layup at 2:05 of the second quarter.

"I don't know if we were nervous," Clark said. "I think we came out tentative and when we got aggressive, we did all right."

Two consecutive Badger turnovers led to four successful Jerome free throws – two by Bay and two by Jacob Tolman to give Bonners Ferry a one-point halftime edge.

The Badgers started out hot from outside, using two treys by Gravelle in the first 49 seconds to take a 6-0 lead. Then they went cold from three-point land, missing their next five attempts. A free throw by Bay with 3:04 left in the first quarter gave the Tigers their first lead of the half, 9-8.

Early run sets tone for Wendell's 73-54 win

Class A-3 tournament

MERIDIAN—What ended early for Wendell High School in the Idaho Class A-3 boys basketball tournament a year ago won't this time around.

The Trojans opened with 12 unanswered points Thursday and went on to rout West Jefferson 73–54.

Wendell returns at 8:30 this evening to meet Teton in one championship semifinal.

The Panthers called timeout two minutes into the first period at the end of that game-opening Wendell run. It was to little avail as the Trojans opened up a 25–7 lead at the first break and, despite substituting freely, still led 39–26 at halftime.

Trojan senior guard Nate Kelsey, who had a game high 34 point was 5-of-9 in three-point attempts. He consistently out-maneuvered the West Jefferson defense.

West Jefferson committed a number of defensive fouls under the basket unable to box out Chris Tuttle, Wendell's 6–4 senior center. Tuttle had 14 points and 10 rebounds.

Wendell Coach Allen Kelsey said he was pleased with his teams' play but said the Trojans would have to improve on defense Friday against Teton. "Chris Tuttle played a whale of a game," Kelsey said.

The slam and consistent shooting of Kelsey held off a fourth quarter run by West Jefferson which closed a 14-point lead to nine after West Jefferson point-guard Rodney Gilstrap hit three consecutive 3-pointers.

But Gilstrap's ball-handling and shooting was all the offense West Jefferson could produce in the final minutes. Kelsey controlled the ball throughout the fourth quarter hitting 3 three–pointers, breaking the West Jefferson press and pulling up outside to shoot.

Coach Kelsey began clearing the bench with three minutes left and the last Wendell player remaining on the bench made it onto the floor with eight seconds left.

Elks, high school team up for boxing

By Ron Gates
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – The Twin Falls Elks Boxing Club has scheduled a 16–bout amateur boxing card for Saturday.

The event, the first such program, held in Twin Falls in more than a year, begins at 7:30 p.m., Mar. 5 in the old Twin Falls High School gymnasium.

"We're going to divide the proceeds with the Bruin Athletic Fund," said promoter Woody Turley, who doubles as coach for the Twin Falls Elks pugilists. The Elks Club was unavailable on fight night and the high school was kind enough to let us hold the event there."

Admission is $5 and tickets can be purchased in advance at Perrine Barber Shop, La Casita Mexican Restaurant, OK Barber Shop, Gem State Trophies, Mr. Postman or at the College of Southern Idaho bookstore.

Nationally ranked light heavyweight Tom Finnegan heads a local contingent which also features 13–year–old J.D. Covington. Covington will face an as yet undetermined 90–pound challenger.

"We have several boys representing the Jerome Boxing Club," Turley noted. "Ron Carnell is presently ranked sixth nationally in the 139–pound class. He'll be fighting an opponent from Nyssa, Oregon.

In addition to Pocatello and the Oregon club, boxers from teams in Boise, Nampa and Caldwell – including several junior Olympic and American Boxing Federation champions – will test local competitors.

Rob Welch answered for Twin Falls with an 18-foot jumper, which was followed by a John Krahn layup.

A turnover by Mountain Home gave the Bruins a chance to run the minute off the clock to 1:32. Four free throws by Brady Trenkle against a Wallace basket put Twin Falls up 53-46 into the last minute.

That cushion was enough for the Bruins to hold off the two 3-pointers other Mountain Home players hit in the last 40 seconds.

Krahn finished with 20 points, Trenkle 11 Brad Starley 10.

Five straight points by Wallace tied the game at 36 with 2:54 to go in the third game, but Krahn scored the next five for Twin Falls.

"They packed a zone back deeper than we saw against Borah," Allen said the next 10 points and CSI found itself behind by 10 to 17 points just about the rest of the afternoon.

"We got content to where we were one pass in shooting. Finally we started getting back inside to Big John, and he went to the basket hard."

But four free throws took SLCC back to an 83-70 lead and it was over.

"Coming out and shooting the way we did just killed us," Irons said. "When you miss those kind of shots, everything gets worse. Our defense fed off that disappointment and they just pulled away from us."

"I felt if we could control one of them, we had a good shot at winning," Irons said.

He got his wish. The Eagles limited Silas Mills to 8 points, 10 under his average. But top-gun Charles Overton and freshman Marcel Johnson, both excellent shooters, posted up anytime CSI had to put a small man on them and they feasted for 28 and 25 points, respectively.

By halftime, CSI was down 40-30 and the stats told the story. CSI was 10=30 from the field and 6-9 from the line. SLCC was an even 50 percent and 16-19 from the line.

But at the line, SLCC was 30-39 while CSI was 9-15.

By Friday morning he planned to be in the office on the phone and recruiting hard.

There is some sentiment for splitting the womens and mens sites again although previous history indicates the womens tournament cannot financially pay for itself.

Royals 4, Central Florida 2

At Haines City, Fla., Phil Hiatt singled in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning and rookie shortstop Joe Randa had three singles.

Chris Haney, Jeff Granger and Doug Harris each pitched two scoreless innings for Kansas City. Enrique Burgos struck out two in the ninth for the save. Kansas City pitchers struck out 11.

• Baltimore first baseman Rafael Palmeiro homered in his first at-bat as an Oriole. Colorado's Howard Johnson did the same on his first pitch.

• Cincinnati starter Tom Browning allowed seven runs and six hits in two innings, including two two-run homer and a three-run homer.

• Kevin Maas and Robert Eenhorn of the New York Yankees each hit two-run homers and Jim Abbott allowed one hit and struck out two in three innings.

• Tim Wallach of the Los Angeles Dodgers hit a three-run home run and teammate Mike Piazza added a two-run homer in a 9-9 tie.

• Milwaukee catcher Dave Nilsson had a double and triple and drove in three runs.

In other news, the Boston Red Sox signed 13 players to one-year contracts, completing their negotiations with players for the 1994 season. Mo Vaughn got the best deal — a base salary of $675,000 with $60,000 in incentives.

"I'm just a man playing a kid's game," he said. "Making this kind of money playing a game is kind of funny to me. It's all happened really fast."

The California Angels signed outfielder Tim Salmon to a $7.5 million, four-year contract that makes him the highest-paid second-year player in baseball history. Outfielder Chad Curtis and shortstop Gary DiSarcina also agreed to multi-year contracts.

Cougars edge past Sun Devils

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Fred Ferguson scored 21 points and grabbed 16 rebounds Thursday night, and Nathan Erdmann added 20 points as Washington State defeated Arizona State 80-71.

Ferguson had 13 points and 10 rebounds in the second half, when the Cougars (18-9, 8-7) took command with a 17-3 run.

College basketball

Ferguson, whose 8-for-12 night was just over his league-leading 66.3 shooting percentage, completed the rally with another layup, and the Cougars led 62-49 with 9:27 left.

Tony Harris, who had 15 points, made a layin with 5:42 to play for the biggest lead of the game, 71-55.

Stevin Smith led the Sun Devils (13-12, 8-8) with 19 points, and Burton added 17.

Arizona State led by eight points twice in the first half — 11-3 on Mario Bennett's fourth basket in the first 4:35, and 30-22 with 4:47 to go after Smith and Burton hit 3-pointers.

However, Ferguson started a 10-1 rally with an rebound, Dominic Ellison sank 3-pointers only 20 seconds apart, and Ferguson put Washington State ahead 32-31 with a dunk with 2:13 to play.

Arizona 95, Washington 62

TUCSON, Ariz. – Ray Owes scored a career-high 25 points as revenge-minded, steal-intent No. 8 Arizona repaid Washington for an earlier loss with a 95-62 victory Thursday night.

Khalid Reeves had 28 points as the Wildcats (24-4, 13-3 Pac-10) won their seventh straight game since losing 74-69 at Washington on Feb. 5.

The Huskies committed their 11th turnover 9:09 into the game and lost the ball 19 times in the first half to fall behind 50-32, despite shooting nearly 67 percent. They finished with 30 turnovers.

Jamie Brookins, who led Washington with 15 points, hit three 3-pointers in the first four minutes of the second half, but the Huskies never came closer than 56-43.

Owes pulled down nine rebounds, while Joe McLean added 12 points for Arizona. Reeves' backcourt mate, Damon Stoudamire, scored only three points, 15 below his average, but had 11 assists and four steals.

Scott Didrickson added 14 points and Maurice Woods 12 for Washington.

Kansas 97, Iowa St. 79

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) – Richard Scott had a career-high 24 points in his final home game and Greg Ostertag broke a team record for blocked shots Thursday night as No. 12 Kansas routed Iowa State 97-79.

Introduced along with their parents before their last home game, three seniors kept the arena supercharged with emotion. Steve Woodberry, Scott and Patrick Richey have been part of three Big Eight championships and two Final Fours for Kansas (23-6, 8-5 Big Eight).

Fred Hoiberg had 24 points for Iowa State and Julius Michalik had 22.

It was the third time in six seasons that Iowa State (13-12, 3-10) was assigned to be Kansas' opponent on Seniors Night. The Cyclones have lost 28 of their last 30 games in Allen Field House and had lost their previous three trips to Lawrence by margins of 31, 31 and 45 points.

Alabama-Birmingham 84, Dayton 53

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. – Alabama-Birmingham coach Gene Bartow had a bad feeling about his Blazers' game with Dayton on Thursday night. Then it started.

Robert Shannon scored 29 points including five 3-pointers as No. 24 Alabama-Birmingham defeated Dayton 84-53.

"Dayton had just beaten Detroit by 30 the other night, they beat Saint Louis in overtime about two weeks ago," Bartow said. "I have to admit I was queasy about this game."

The Blazers (21-6, 7-4 Great Midwest) held Dayton to 34 percent shooting in extending its winning streak to three games.

New Mexico 84, BYU 82, OT

PROVO, Utah – Greg Brown scored 34 points and Marlow White added 22 as New Mexico defeated BYU 84-82 in overtime Thursday night.

With the win, New Mexico (14-3, 22-5) claimed its first Western Athletic Conference championship since 1978. The Lobos were picked to finish fifth in the preseason polls.

White connected on three free throws with 17 seconds remaining to bring New Mexico within 73-71.

During the overtime, BYU eased to an 80-76 lead with 3:10 to go. Craig Wilcox's two free throws gave the Cougars that margin after Roberts had scored four points to open the period and Brown had responded with a layup.

Brown drove the lane with 2:17 to go to bring New Mexico within 80-78. Robbie Reid hit two free throws with 59 seconds left to give BYU an 82-78 lead.

Cavs extend streak; Warriors beat Suns

Pro basketball

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) – John Williams had 20 points and 12 rebounds and Mark Price made two key defensive plays in the closing minute Thursday night as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Philadelphia 76ers 95-87 for their ninth straight victory.

Philadelphia lost its 11th in a row, its longest losing streak since it dropped 13 straight during its 9-73 season in 1972-73. The Sixers have lost their last 12 meetings with Cleveland.

Tyrone Hill had 18 points and 11 rebounds and Gerald Wilkins scored 15 for the Cavs, whose winning streak has come mostly against teams with losing records.

Knicks 97, Nets 86

NEW YORK – Patrick Ewing had 28 points and 16 rebounds, and New York opened the fourth quarter with a 15-0 run to beat New Jersey for the first time in four tries this season.

A midcourt 3-pointer by Chris Morris at the third-quarter buzzer gave the Nets their only lead of the second half, 72-71, but they missed their first 11 shots of the fourth quarter.

Greg Anthony scored five of his 18 points in less than a minute during the spurt. John Starks scored 17 for New York, including nine in the fourth quarter when the Knicks outscored New Jersey 26-14.

Hawks 109, Bullets 98

LANDOVER, Md. – Danny Manning scored half of his 22 points in the fourth quarter to lead Atlanta to its fifth straight victory.

Manning, playing his third game since being obtained from the Los Angeles Clippers, also had 13 rebounds and seven assists. Duane Ferrell, starting for flu-ridden Kevin Willis, scored 21 and Stacey Augmon had 20.

The Hawks were clinging to a one-point lead when Ferrell scored on a dunk off a pass from Manning to spark an 8-0 run that made it 102-93 with 3:04 left. After the Bullets closed to 104-97, Manning hit two straight jumpers to seal Washington's 14th loss in 17 games.

Magic 107, Mavericks 94

DALLAS – Shaquille O'Neal dominated the Dallas Mavericks with 43 points and 16 rebounds Thursday night, leading the Orlando Magic to a 107-94 victory.

It was the highest point total by a Mavericks opponent this season and O'Neal's fifth 40-point game of the season. The Magic won for the eighth time in their last nine games.

Dallas pulled to 84-78 with 8:05 left, but O'Neal scored six points during a 12-0 run that pushed the lead to 18. O'Neal, who set his career-high with 49 points earlier this season against Indiana, left the game with 2:44 to play and the Magic in front 98-83.

Dennis Scott and Anfernee Hardaway scored 13 points each in support of O'Neal, who hadn't reached 30 points in the last four games.

O'Neal dominated the first half with 22 points but Orlando was only ahead 50-47 at intermission. The 7-foot-1 center had two dunks and a free throw to lead a 14-1 run in the closing stages of the third quarter as the Magic expanded a 61-58 lead to 75-59.

Warriors 120, Suns 107

OAKLAND, Calif. – Chris Mullin scored 25 points on 11-of-13 shooting and Avery Johnson made his last seven shots to finish with a season-high 23 points as Golden State beat Phoenix 120-107 Thursday night.

The Warriors won their second straight game over Phoenix after enduring a six-game losing streak to the Suns over two seasons. Charles Barkley led all scorers with 26 points and 11 rebounds, while Mark West added 21 points.

The Warriors were up 93-83 after three, but the Suns challenged with a 6-0 run in the fourth quarter, cutting the lead to 104-98 on Cedric Ceballos' layup.

Thinclad won't let obstacles slow him down

The Associated Press

ATLANTA – His father abandoned him when he was 3 years old and wound up in jail for dealing drugs. His mother died that same year from a blood clot on the brain. And when he started school, he was labeled "culturally dysfunctional."

Yet Henry Neal has overcome all those obstacles to become one of the world's top sprinters — and a member of the Dean's List at Texas Southern.

The 23-year-old Neal will seek his first national title Saturday in the 60-meter dash at the USA-Mobil Indoor Championships at the Georgia Dome.

If he can disregard the psychological games played on him by some other runners, he could win.

"I think I know how to handle it now," Neal said.

He couldn't cope with it in his last two meets, finishing third at 60 meters Feb. 6 at Fairfax, Va., and fourth at 50 meters Feb. 19 at Los Angeles. That was after winning his first four races of the season — two at 60 meters, one at 55 and one at 50.

Those victories had convinced Neal he had conquered the problem of being distracted by his opposition.

"They played a lot of mind games with me last year," he said, "and they still try to do it to me. Sometimes, they'll say something before the race or when I'm getting ready to run. Or they'll start hollering, or showing off in the middle of the track. And sometimes, they even false-start on purpose. Just to try and throw me off.

"I used to get involved watching them and not concentrate on what I was supposed to be doing. Now, I've gotten smarter."

Both as an athlete and as a student, Neal, who was born in Greenville, Texas, was taken in by his grandparents, A.J. and Ella Bonner, after his parents were gone.

"My grandmother, who is hard of hearing, sacrificed a lot for me and for my sister," Neal said. "So I wanted to make something out of my life."

"He didn't have the start in life that most of us have," said David Gish, an assistant principal at Greenville High School, who coached Neal from the seventh through the 12th grades.

Gish said that when Neal began school, he was assigned to classes for culturally deprived students. But under the tutelage of Gish and his wife, who assisted Neal with his studies, the youngster was enrolled in mainstream programs by his junior year in high school.

He took courses in British literature and read books like "Macbeth" and "The Hobbitt", Gish said.

"He was in the sixth grade," Gish said, "and his sister was on my track team. One day, I saw this skinny kid long-jumping. I couldn't believe he was only 10 or 11 and long-jumping 16 or 17 feet."

After the two became acquainted, "Henry spent many nights at my house," Gish said. "Since then, he has become like a son to me."

Not only did Gish help Neal overcome his educational shortcomings, he helped turn him into a first-class sprinter. As a high school junior, Neal won the Texas 5-A 100-meter title. The following year, he won both the 100 and 200. His times of 10.15 for the 100 and 20.46 for the 200 topped the 1990 U.S. scholastic lists, and he was chosen the nation's No. 1 100-meter high school runner.

NBA attendance jumps

NEW YORK (AP) – Michael who?

Despite the retirement of Michael Jordan, NBA attendance is up 1.63 percent this season. Huge increases in San Antonio and Houston are offsetting big drops by the Los Angeles Lakers and Clippers.

Attendance has increased for 12 teams, decreased for 10 and remained uncharged for five clubs because of continuing sellout streaks.

Despite the loss of Jordan, the Bulls' attendance is up slightly (0.08 percent) over last year. Many people expected Chicago to slip this year without Jordan, but the three-time defending champion Bulls (37-19) have done surprisingly well. Heading into Thursday night, they trailed first-place Atlanta by 2½ games in the Central Division.

All but three of the attendance drops can be attributed to declining fortunes on the court. The only teams with attendance losses who appear headed for the playoffs are Seattle, with a 2.56 percent drop; Utah, with a decline of 0.23 percent; and Indiana, which also has fallen less than half of one percent.

The largest attendance increase is in San Antonio, where the Spurs are playing in the new Alamodome with one of the best teams in the NBA. Crowds are up 35.38 percent from their average of 16,057 at HemisFair Arena last season.

Houston has the second-biggest increase, 20.72 percent, although the Rockets' overall average this season is still somewhat disappointing for a championship contender. Houston is drawing 14,996 at the Summit, up from 12,423. The Lakers are down 15.4 percent, with their average attendance falling from 15,178 in 1992-93 to 12,841 this season.

Subs cast doubt on championship card

LAS VEGAS (AP) – Gilbert Baptist has lost 16 times.

These three boxers will appear as substitutes on Friday's night card of five world title fights at the MGM Grand. The show is billed as Global War Fare, but it could be called Don King Presents Musical Stools.

Baptist suddenly became a championship challenger eight days ago when he was picked to fight Gerald McClellan for the WBC middleweight title after top-ranked Lamar Parks injured a shoulder.

Only one of Baptist's losses on his 28-16 record was by knockout. That came when he was stopped in the 11th round by Parks last Aug. 10.

"I went down and got up, and the referee stopped it," the 30-year-old Baptist said.

Asked if the fight was stopped too quickly, Baptist said, "I have no regrets."

Picar, 26, of the Philippines, got a chance to challenge WBA junior middleweight champion Julio Cesar Vasquez, 28, of Argentina, when Rafael Pineda of Colombia dropped out. The report here was that Pineda was involved in marital dispute. "I've got six records for Picar," said Mark Ratner, executive director of the Nevada State Athletic Commission.

Three of the records are 11-11-2, 16-13-4 and 17-6-4. Whatever the record, the WBA ranks Picar as its No. 5 contender.

The 37-year-old McCallum was training for a 10-round bout on the card when he learned a week ago that he would be fighting for a title. He will replace Jeff Harding of Australia, who was supposed to defend the WBC light heavyweight title against Randall Yonker, who will be 31 on March 13.

Harding, who has not fought since Dec. 3, 1992, suffered a cut in training. Since it was the sixth straight time Harding has pulled out of a fight for various reasons, the WBC ruled that the McCallum-Yonker match will be for the interim title.

Also defending titles will be IBF junior middleweight champion Gianfranco Rosi of Italy and WBA cruiserweight champion Orlin Norris Jr. Rosi will fight Vincent Pettway, and Norris will fight Arthur Williams.

This will be the first time five world title bouts have been held on the same card. It should be noted, however, in this era of a population explosion among champions, it is not difficult to present multiple-title cards.

The IBF, WBA and WBC, the three main boxing governing bodies, each recognize 17 weight classes. That means there could be 51 champions.

There are only 49, however, because both the IBF and WBA recognize heavyweight Evander Holyfield and both the IBF and WBC recognize junior flyweight Humberto Gonzalez of Mexico.

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) – The countdown continues at new Space Coast Stadium, where the Florida Marlins begin their second spring season Friday against the Kansas City Royals.

Workers may be scrambling to apply final touches right up to game time at the ballpark, which still looked like a construction site Thursday.

"It's not chaos; it's organized confusion," said Richard Andersen, Marlins vice president of business operations. "This is normally a 16- to 18-month project, and we built a stadium in 10 months. So we knew from the beginning that we'd be right up against it. But for the last six weeks, there's been no question that we would have it done."

A year ago, everything about the expansion Marlins was new. They won their spring-training opener, which turned out not to be an omen — Florida went 64-98 during the regular season.

The lineup looks much the same at the start of year-2, but the setting has been substantially upgraded. The Marlins played last year at rustic Cocoa Expo, inconveniently located 10 miles north of their training complex.

Now, the new stadium, six practice fields, clubhouses and offices are all together on a $20 million, 100-acre site overlooking cow pastures west of Melbourne.

"This facility, when it's all finished, is probably going to be the best one in Florida," manager Rene Lachemann said.

Fans should like it as much as Lachemann. The Marlins pledge top-notch concession food and accommodations, with elements of intimacy. Borrowing from Dodgertown in Vero Beach, the Marlins will provide a picnic area for 400 spectators on a grassy berm beyond the left-field fence.

Brent Webb works on an electrical conduit at Space Coast Stadium Thursday in Viera Beach, Fla.

'This is normally a 16- to 18-month project, and we built a stadium in 10 months. So we knew from the beginning that we'd be right up against it. But for the last six weeks, there's been no question that we would have it done.'

— Richard Andersen, Marlins vice president

The 7,500-seat ballpark also includes high-tech touches — an exploding scoreboard, elaborate sound system and 80-foot-long spaceship.

A prototype of the X-30, designed as a possible replacement to the space shuttle in the 21st century, arrived Thursday on loan from NASA. The craft will be displayed in the plaza area.

The spaceship won't fly, but the scoreboard will send a ball "into orbit" every time a Marlin homers.

"It's corny," Andersen said. "But it's kind of fun."

The $6 million stadium, also the home of the Marlins' new Florida State League team, was financed with a one-cent Brevard County hotel bed tax.

The investment should pay immediate dividends. Andersen said the Marlins have sold all but 10,000 tickets for their 17 home games.

Instead, the Detroit Tigers signed Tim Belcher. He might be capable of pitching over 200 innings, but he has never won 20 games in a season.

That means the Tigers will go into the 1994 season with essentially the same pitching they had a year ago. Yet the manager is convinced things are better now.

"We are better right now than we have been in the last five years," Anderson said. "Now how that will translate when we start playing, I don't know."

Last season, the Tigers' team ERA was 4.65.

That means all the Detroit pitchers, starters and relievers together, combined to allow 4.65 earned runs for every nine innings pitched. That's far too many, even with an offense as powerful as the Tigers' attack.

Of the five pitchers in the Tigers' starting rotation, only David Wells had an ERA lower than 4.30.

Wells started the season with a 9-1 record and a 2.68 ERA through June 19.

Then, the roof fell in. Wells finished 11-9 with a 4.19 ERA.

"He has pretty good stuff," Anderson said.

"I don't think anybody would deny that. He had a little arm trouble late in the season. Maybe it was because he had never been a starter before."

Much was expected of Moore after he signed as a free agent following the 1992 season.

But he was just 5-5 with a 6.67 ERA after 21 starts on July 25. He finished 13-9 with a 5.22 ERA.

Moore will be the starter Friday when the Tigers open the exhibition season against the Cleveland Indians. Moore also will be the starter April 4 in Boston when the Tigers open the regular season against the Red Sox.

'I think Mike is a different guy, now, than he was a year ago. He's more comfortable. He had a great second half last season.'

— Sparky Anderson, on pitcher Mike Moore

"I think Mike is a different guy, now, than he was a year ago," Anderson said.

"He's more comfortable. He had a great second half last season."

Belcher was 9-6 with a 4.47 ERA before the Cincinnati Reds traded him to Chicago. He was 3-5 with a 4.40 ERA for the White Sox.

Gullickson started 1993 on the disabled list. He was recovering from offseason knee and shoulder surgery. He didn't pitch in the major leagues until May 9, finishing 13-9 with a 5.37 ERA.

Doherty, in only his second major-league season and first as a full-time starter, led the team in victories. He put together a 14-11 record with a 4.44 ERA. Doherty is only 24 years old, and might be the hope of the future.

But, even if he becomes a mainstay in the rotation, Doherty will never be a dominating power pitcher. He simply doesn't have the kind of arm someone like Roger Clemens does.

"The odds swing to your favor," Anderson said. "When Clemens pitches, it might be 75-25 in your favor, if you're the guy who's got Clemens. It might be interesting to surround a guy like that with an offense like ours."

The Tigers hit 178 homers and scored 899 runs last season, but their own pitchers gave up 188 homers and 837 runs.

That's why the Tigers finished 85-77, tied for third in the AL East and 10 games behind the first-place Toronto Blue Jays.

Eckersley finally sheds memory of homer

PHOENIX (AP) – Dennis Eckersley feels liberated these days. Roberto Alomar's home run is finally gone from his mind, relegated to the history books.

"Everything seems so relaxing," he said Thursday morning, flashing a smile as the Oakland Athletics began their first workout of the spring at their main training camp.

Last year, his mind couldn't escape the bitter ending of 1992, when he gave up a ninth-inning homer to Alomar in Game 4 of the AL playoffs, allowing Toronto to take a 3-1 lead in the series, which the Blue Jays won in six.

All winter long, Eckersley couldn't get it out of his mind. To him, it was more significant than becoming the ninth pitcher to win the Cy Young and Most Valuable Player awards in the same season. "It just seemed like it always popped into my head," he said. "It takes away from all the awards. Awards are great when you look back."

This winter was entirely different. Eckersley needed only one indicator to tell him that Alomar was behind him.

"I slept better," he said.

"I worked out every day," he said. "I'm going to be 40 years old in October. The closer you get to 40 — it's like an obsession."

He started back in 1975 with the Cleveland Indians, 20 season ago, and not too many of his contemporaries from the '70s are left. George Brett and Robin Yount retired this winter, even though they could have played at least one more year. They just weren't motivated any more.

"There's a lot for me left," Eckersley said. "I feel like I'm proving something to me all the time. There's a whole lifetime ahead of me. I'll get to that later."

His career with Cleveland, Boston and the Chicago Cubs seems so long ago. It's easy to forget that some thought he was finished in the mid-'80s, that he went through alcohol rehabilitation and became the best reliever in the game.

After saving 40 or more games for three straight seasons, including 51 in 54 chances in 1992, Eckersley saved only 36 of 46 opportunities last year, and his ERA soared from 1.91 to 4.16. The 10 blown saves were his most since he became a full-time closer in 1988.

After the A's lost 11 of 14 on a road trip following the All-Star break, the rest of the season was just preparation for 1994. "We're looking to recover that aura," he said. "We're trying to get back that feeling people had, that when they played us they expected to lose a series. Last year, we expected to lose a series."

He understands why Brett and Yount retired. It's hard for him to leave his 3-year-old son, Jake.

"People would trade for this, but there's a lot you miss," he said.

He has a daughter from his first marriage, Mandee, who'll be going to college next fall. Baseball, which keeps you away from home 4-5 months a year, combined with his divorce to keep him from watching her grow up.

"She's had a tough life," Eckersley said. "She'll be here next week. She's thinking of going to the U of A(rizona)."

Defection, possible violations haunt Big South alignment

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) – The Big South has longed for the prestige and profile of the big-time basketball conferences. But along with big success on the court have come big problems off it.

An NCAA investigation at Coastal Carolina and the acrimonious defection of Campbell have diluted what's expected to be the strongest conference tournament in the Big South's 10 years. The tournament begins Friday at the North Charleston Coliseum. "I think it's the growing pains that schools and conferences have with the membership," commissioner Buddy Sasser said.

The league's reputation was bolstered by early-season victories over big-name opponents — Towson State over St. John's, Campbell over North Carolina State and South Carolina, and Radford over LSU.

But then came allegations that Russ Bergman, coach of defending league champion Coastal, had violated a host of NCAA rules.

The NCAA declared four Chanticleers ineligible, including standouts Mohammed Acha and Joey Hart. All but Acha were reinstated, but athletic director Andy Hendrick pulled the team from the league tournament and Coastal forfeited its first 14 league games. "It's certainly not something that we ever want to see happen to us or anybody else in the conference," Hendrick said. "But it's basically Coastal's situation and I don't think it has any detrimental effect on the conference." Hendrick doesn't expect the NCAA to decide on any sanctions for at least a month.

In January, Campbell said it would leave the Big South for the Trans America Athletic Conference next season. The school and the conference tussled about whether Campbell violated its conference agreement by not giving two years' notice before moving. Campbell's departure could endanger the Big South's automatic NCAA tournament bid. The league would have just four members with five years' continuous experience, one below the NCAA's requirement.

That won't do much for the Big South's esteem or its recruiting, said Terry Truax, coach of regular-season champion Towson State.

Series of quakes may jolt Southern California

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Scientists examining movement along faults in Southern California said Wednesday that the region may be in for a series of earthquakes comparable to the Jan. 17 temblor that shook Los Angeles — or a single far greater quake — in upcoming decades.

Lucile M. Jones, a geophysicist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Pasadena, Calif., told a House committee that the Southern California Earthquake Center has looked at 150 years of quake data and concluded there have not been enough quakes to explain all the shifting along faults.

She told the House Science, Space and Technology committee that the region has experienced "only one-third the number of large and major earthquakes" expected, given the rate of movement along faults.

"Where are the missing earthquakes?" Jones told the hearing called to discuss the Jan. 17 earthquake, centered in the Northridge area of Los Angeles. Her answer was that stresses accumulated inside the earth may be unleashed in the coming decades.

In Los Angeles, the executive director of the Southern California Earthquake Center said he was "a little bit aghast" that the conclusions were announced Wednesday, but added that the findings are endorsed by scientists in the group. There is some disagreement, however, about the probability of the future quakes.

"We've reached a point now where our models are predicting more Northridge-type earthquakes or bigger earthquakes in the future than we've had in the last 150 years," said Tom Henyey, the center's executive director. The earthquake center was established by the National Science Foundation to improve the methodology for forecasting quake movement in Southern California.

Highlighting the lack of certainty in quake analysis, Henyey added that it is also possible that seismic stress has not increased. Scientists are still evaluating data for a detailed report to be released this summer, he said.

Nonetheless, the center's overall finding is consistent with concerns expressed by other scientists that the Jan. 17 Northridge quake may be a forerunner, if not a foreshock, to a more intense temblor or series of quakes.

Allan Lindh, chief of seismology for the Geological Survey at Menlo Park, Calif., said Wednesday that there were one or two serious earthquakes in the San Francisco Bay area each decade for 70 years before the catastrophic 8.3 quake in 1906. He said that such a pattern — which has also been recorded in Japan and Russia — appears to be repeating itself in Southern California in recent decades.

"Is this evidence that the stress level in the ground in Southern California is building back to the point where there'll be another great earthquake?" Lindh said. "The answer is probably yes. Then the question is: How soon? We probably don't know."

Jones, who is also a visiting research associate at the California Institute of Technology, offered three possible explanations for what she called "the L.A. Dilemma."

The first is that the region is in for "at least five more earthquakes as large as the Northridge earthquake," a magnitude 6.8. Under this scenario, the high rate of severe quakes in Southern California in the last six years may be the long-term norm.

The second option, Jones said, is that "we are building up the stress to a much larger earthquake" of magnitude 7.5 to 8. She said that "only one magnitude 8 would be needed to release the energy of 30 magnitude 7 events."

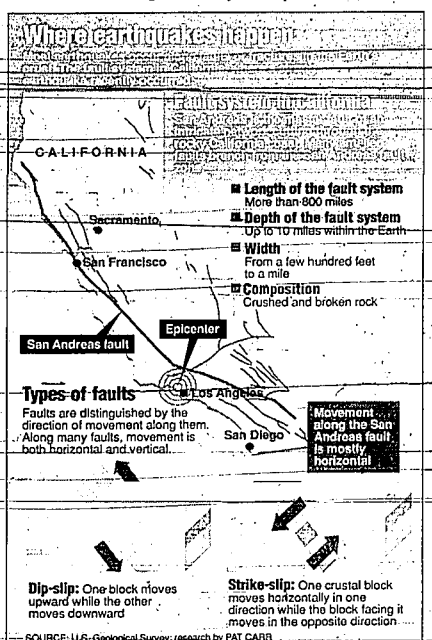

The third possibility is that movement on the faults is occurring without precipitating earthquakes. Jones said such aseismic slips might explain some of the "missing" quakes, but not all. She also said that this process has been "shown to be an important part of the picture elsewhere in the world but not so far in Southern California."

Determining which of the explanations, or combination of them, is right would require "analysis of five to 10 years of data from improved geodetic and seismic networks," Jones said. She said funding is inadequate for research on earthquake prediction and analysis.

Jones said that the large and fast-moving San Andreas fault remains Southern California's single greatest earthquake hazard. But she added that a large bend in the fault in Southern California "complicates the geology and leads to over 300 other faults all capable" of producing temblors of magnitude 6 or greater.

During the hearing, geophysicists and engineers called upon the government to re-examine municipal building codes — which are designed to save lives by preventing structures from collapsing — in an effort to minimize the economic impact.

They said this was particularly necessary given the $20 billion in damage inflicted by the Northridge quake and the likelihood that a more potent temblor could cause far greater devastation.

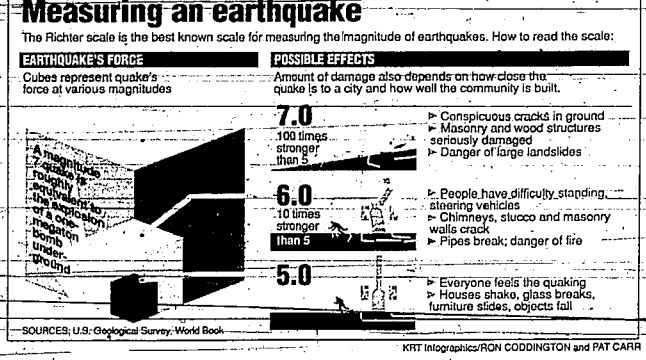

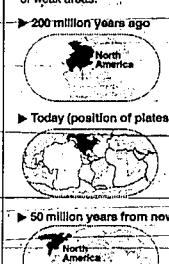

Plate tectonics

Plate tectonics is the scientific theory that says the Earth's crust is divided into 30 plates or sections. The plates collide, separate or shift, straining the rock and producing fault zones or weak areas.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

—James Russell Lowell

Today's West knew his partner couldn't have much in high cards, so he limited his hopes to finding him with a key spot-card. West got his wish but he failed to take full advantage. South read West's intentions and landed a counterpunch to save his game.

South took East's diamond jack with his queen and played a spade to dummy's queen to lead a club. West won his queen and paused for reflection. West saw 10 HCP in dummy and 12 HCP in his own hand. South had promised about 16 HCP by his opening bid. Clearly East could hold no more than a jack, so West's only hope was to find East with the diamond eight. With that card, West's diamonds could be established before his club ace was gone.

West's analysis was accurate; his execution was wrong. He cashed his diamond ace and led another diamond to East's eight, hoping to knock out South's king. No patsy, South refused to take his diamond king and the defense was stymied. South ruffed only two diamonds and two clubs, and the game was scored.

A more effective move by West would have been to lead another low diamond instead of the ace and another. East's eight would have forced South to win his king (or lose it), and West's diamond suit would have defeated the game.

What good does it do to wish for something unless one is prepared to take advantage of the good fortune?

IF YOU CAN'T DEAL WITH ME ~ WHO ARE YOU GOING TO DEAL WITH?

THEISEN MOTORS

IDAHO'S LARGEST LINCOLN-MERCURY DEALER

#1 IN CUSTOMER SATISFACTION OF ANY FORD-LINCOLN-MERCURY DEALER IN THE STATE FOR 7 YEARS IN A ROW!

Theisen Motors, the top Lincoln/Mercury dealer in the state of Idaho. No fleets or commercial vehicles, but family cars delivered one at a time to smart customers who demand quality & value. For over 40 years Idaho families have put their trust in Theisen Motors for automobile excellence.

Winners of the prestigious Chairman's Award, Ford Motor Co.'s highest award for sales & service satisfaction, judged by our customers. Unprecedented in the industry that one of the largest value dealers is also #1 in customer satisfaction 7 years in a row!

Theisen Motors believes that every customers deserves first class service. Top notch merchandise, genuine Lincoln/Mercury parts & convenient service hours. These are 4 good reasons for QUALITY SERVICE, KNOWLEDGE, EXPERIENCE & PRIDE.

THE THEISEN MOTORS COMMITMENT:

THE DICTIONARY DEFINES COMMITMENT: 1) A PLEDGE TO DO SOMETHING. 2) THE STATE OF BEING BOUND EMOTIONALLY OR INTELLECTUALLY TO A COURSE OF ACTION. COMMIT TO PLACE IN TRUST OR CHARGE; TO ENTRUST. TO PLEDGE TO A POSITION, TO BIND OR OBLIGATE BY A PLEDGE.

FOR OVER 40 YEARS WE AT THEISEN MOTORS HAVE BEEN COMMITTED TO SELLING & SERVICING AUTOMOBILES ONE WAY - TO ALWAYS STRIVE FOR PERFECTION.

OUR PLEDGE TO YOU...

1. TO GIVE THE FINEST AUTOMOBILE SERVICE ANYWHERE IN THE UNITED STATES.
2. TO ALWAYS TRY TO "PUT OURSELVES IN YOUR SHOES" IN SOLVING A SERVICE PROBLEM.
3. TO BE PROFESSIONAL IN SALES, SERVICE & LEASING.
4. TO MAKE OUR CUSTOMERS' OWNERSHIP AN ENJOYABLE & REWARDING EXPERIENCE.
5. TO BE THE EASIEST PLACE IN THE WORLD TO BUY A CAR!

POWER OF TRUST

You can't buy trust...you have to earn it. That's what Theisen Motors has been doing for 40 years; earning the trust & confidence of the people of Idaho with a total dedication to complete, long-term satisfaction.

It's paid off. People trust Theisen Motors for the right selection, the right price & service 6 days a week. That's how Theisen Motors remains #1 year-after-year. The Theisen Plan is one reason why over 80% of Theisen Motors customers are repeat customers...or referred by someone who has done business with Theisen Motors.

THE THEISEN PLAN ADVANTAGES:

LET THEISEN MOTORS MAINTAIN YOUR CAR.

Movie details Donner Party ordeal

Knight-Ridder News Service

In 1846, James Reed broke the news to his family: They would give up their comfortable home in Jamestown, Ill., and travel west by wagon train to take advantage of new opportunities in the territory of California.

"We'll be five months in safety and comfort," Reed assured wife Margaret, who failed to see the urgency for any 2,000-mile journey and feared the consequences of her husband's decision.

Her wariness of the journey turned out to be prophetic, as you'll see in Sunday night's ABC movie, "One More Mountain," which follows the Reeds into the frozen hell of Donner Pass and one of the most harrowing episodes in the settlement of the American West.

The movie details gruesome aspects of the Donner Party ordeal, including the notorious instances of cannibalism, but doesn't show us anything that stomach-turning. Instead, it concentrates on the relationships among the stranded pioneers, including the incredible cruelty of many.

Perhaps the most interesting issue the film addresses is the damaging effect male wanderlust had on many 19th-century families, who were dragged along on futile treks through the wilderness by unsettled men who simply couldn't be content with the cards life had dealt them.

That question is raised bluntly by Margaret Reed after James enthusiastically tells her about the new world waiting for them in California. "Why isn't this world enough for you?" she asks.

Though James has answers ready, they're not very convincing ones. In retrospect, men like James may be vitally necessary to the surging history of frontier nations, but they may also have been rash and foolish individuals who put their families in jeopardy to satisfy their own restless natures.

For a long time, that seems to be what James Reed was doing to his family, based on the extensive research done by writer-producer John Kuri, whose article about the Reed family inspired the movie and the teleplay by Gerald DiPego. The Reeds ultimately settled in San Jose, where they became prominent citizens. Kuri's research drew upon the family's records as well as diaries and other accounts from survivors of the Donner Party.

The movie suggests that the Reeds were disliked by many members of the wagon train for specious reasons, including jealousy. An astute planner, Reed obtained three of the biggest, most comfortable covered wagons of his era and was able to take many of the family's treasured furnishings with them.

This bothered many who had been forced to leave everything behind and were traveling in harsh accommodations. Margaret Reed was even able to take the family organ along and other trekkers could hear her playing every night at camp.

Jealousy soon gave way to anger as other travelers began to resent Reed's insistence on following the route spelled out by the so-called "Hastings Guide to California." It promised a new, much shorter route to California but turned out to be a disastrous path to death by freezing and starvation.

(The party's route ultimately became the main gateway to Central California from points east. It's now the site of Highway 80.)

At one point, angry pioneers refuse to heed Reed's advice any longer and rally behind a farmer called Donner, whose name ultimately would be linked with the worst expeditionary tragedy in U.S. history.

Conditions for the Reeds worsened daily until they reached their absolute low when a furious traveler attacked James and Margaret with a bullwhip and James killed him in self-defense. Reed was spared from lynching on the spot by accepting the party's ultimatum: Leave the wagon train or die.

That meant Margaret and her children would face the long, miserable months ahead by themselves while James went on alone to California with a promise to return with provisions.

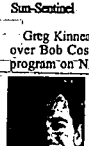

By the time the pioneers reached the mountain passes to California, they were snowed in completely in what turned out to be the worst winter in the history of the Sierra.

'Later' host hopes to keep guest roster

Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

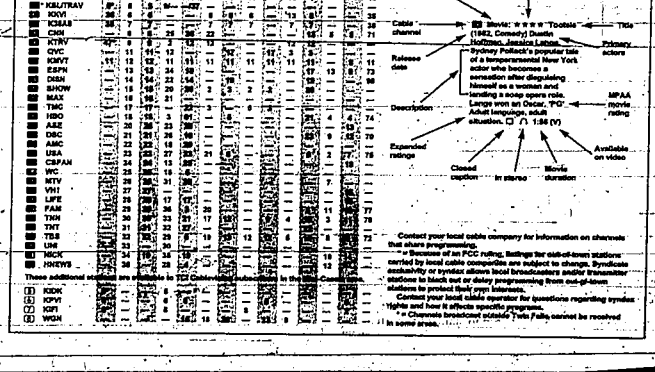

Kinnear

Greg Kinnear, who, took over Bob Costas' "Later" program on NBC Monday night/Tuesday morning hopes to maintain shows eclectic guest roster. One of the elements of Costas' "Later" that Kinnear found appealing was the ability to have Barry Goldwater on one night and Steve Martin the next.

The early lineup of guests released by NBC doesn't reflect this diversity. Julie Louis-Dreyfus of "Seinfeld" is scheduled to be Kinnear's opening night partner.

Celebrity gossip

Q: We've noticed that Connie Sellecca looks different lately. Has she gone the Roseanne Arnold route and had a nose job and other cosmetic surgery? — M.R.

A: At 38, Connie looks great and feels she doesn't yet need the services of a plastic surgeon, no matter what Roseanne does. She does look different, though. The reason: She's had her hair cut. For the Bronx-born Sellecca, that's a big deal. Her former long, flowing black locks won her a lucrative hair care products company contract. The deal specified the length of her hair. When it ran out, Connie felt free to express herself and change her image — thus, the stylish shoulder-length bob we're seeing on "Second Chances," Connie's new TV series. Connie says she's not a fussbudget when it comes to her appearance. Could have fooled me.

Q: What's this about Katharine Hepburn coming out of retirement to make yet another movie? — H.K.

A: In the true tradition of show biz "retirements," the 86-year-old Hepburn declared that her last TV movie was indeed her last. But Katharine recently unretired herself and decided to co-star with Anthony Quinn and 25-year-old Jason Bateman in another TV flick, "This Can't Be Love." Hepburn, reported Bateman, had both "good and bad days" on the set. Nonetheless, the project wound up on schedule. Now I'm hearing that Hepburn may turn up in Warren Beatty's next big-screen movie, "Love Affair," playing Beatty's aunt. As long as Hepburn can still get around, it appears she'll have no trouble landing acting jobs.

Hepburn

Q: Isn't it true that a serious illness has forced singer-actor Robert Goulet into early retirement? — R.R.

A: The 60-year-old Goulet, who has made a career for himself starring in the Lerner and Loewe musical "Camelot," recently was operated on for prostate cancer, the illness that claimed three show biz personalities last year — Frank Zappa, Bill Bixby and Don Ameche. Goulet was lucky: He came through the surgery with flying colors. His doctors ordered him to take five weeks off to recuperate. Goulet said that wasn't possible — he had to be back at work starring as King Arthur in three weeks. Goulet won the argument and opened in "Camelot" in Los Angeles to solid reviews. Encore, we say.

Q: Any idea who will replace the departing Shannen Doherty on "Beverly Hills 90210"? — H.F.

A: Likely, at the moment, is Alyssa "Who's the Boss?" Milano. Producer Aaron Spelling reportedly wanted Drew Barrymore. However, the actress is more interested in pursuing her film career at this time.

Q: Isn't it true that Warren Beatty's ego has gotten the better of him, forcing his latest movie wildly overbudget and overschedule? — K.L.

A: The old Hollywood axiom — that moviegoers rarely inquire about a flick's production schedule when buying a ticket at the box office — may well apply here. Warren is currently making an updated version of a 1939 shipboard comedy-romance titled "Love Affair." Besides Beatty, the cast includes his wife, actress Annette Bening. The film was shot in Hollywood and New York, among other locations. A studio scene calling for fake rain exacted a toll when several key members of the production team came down with the flu. Warren expects the "Love Affair" production to be completed by the end of this month. The movie isn't expected to make it to local theaters until late this year, so there's still plenty of time to fine-tune things.

Beatty

Q: If my teen-age daughter writes to some of her favorite actors from "Melrose Place" and "Baywatch," do you think the letters will actually reach their hands or is she wasting her time? — P.A.

A: Because of the large volume of fan mail — some popular performers receive thousands of letters each week — it is virtually impossible for the actors to handle their own letters. To deal with this, a number of mail services in Los Angeles work for either studios or celebrities to handle the mail. Depending on the request of the fan and the fan mail budget of the star or the studio, any number of responses are possible. Some fans receive letters, photos or postcard responses.

A: Although the Douglas men have careers that regrettably keep them apart a good portion of the year, they did manage to all get together at Michael and Diandra Douglas' Santa Barbara home for Christmas last year. Brothers Eric, Peter and Joel joined Kirk and Anne Douglas for a family holiday.

Q: What's this about Barbara Walters agreeing to be the subject of one of those vulgar show business "roasts," the kind that got Ted Danson into so much trouble? For such a classy woman, what can she be thinking of? — A.R.

A: I agree with your "classy" description. That's why some eyebrows were raised when it was disclosed that she'll be the subject of a Friar's Club tribute this May. I've been to similar Friar's functions and can tell you they are indeed raunchy.

Walters

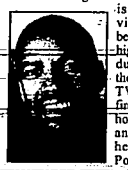

But this particular event — at New York's swank Waldorf Hotel — is being described as a "tribute" and not a "roast." The difference is important. Guests will include such non-Friar's Club types as Anthony Hopkins, director Mike Nichols, Diane Sawyer, Sam Donaldson, Peter Jennings and Sharon Stone. Candice Bergen will be the master of ceremonies. Barbara may get some mild ribbing, but don't expect the string of blue-comedy insults and other verbal bijinks that often occur at show biz roasts.

Q: Now that Denzel Washington has become a major movie star, I was wondering whether he made his film debut in "A Soldier's Story," the first movie in which I can recall seeing him. — V.O.

A: Washington was outstanding in 1984's "A Soldier's Story," re-creating the role he originated on Broadway. However, film audiences first saw the actor in the 1981 comedy "Carbon Copy," in which he appeared as the illegitimate son of George Segal.

Q: I keep waiting for another showing of "Jesus of Nazareth," that great NBC miniseries. Any chance it will be on soon?

A: The long wait — about four years — is nearly over for viewers who have been asking about this highly acclaimed production. At least for those who have cable TV, Franco Zeffirelli's four-part, 12-hour miniseries (with an international cast headed by Robert Powell in the title role) will be shown March 28-31, on the Family Channel. Previously, "Jesus of Nazareth" was shown on NBC in 1977, 1979, 1980, 1984, 1987 and 1990. Incidentally, it is also available on the video market.

GENERAL HOSPITAL

Sonny tries to make a life-saving pact with Frank Smith as the day for his escape attempt approaches. But will it be enough to spare Luke from Frank's anger? Laura confides her secret to a delighted Tiffany. Damian gets Bobbie involved in an upcoming charity event against her will. Edward remarks to Ned that Katherine would be a good wife prospect, but Ned has enough on his mind now that Brenda is aware of his double life as "Eddie Maine." Karen and her mother experience an emotional roller coaster ride as the day of Karen's wedding to Jagger draws near. Jagger confronts his brother, Stone, about a dangerous situation, and the situation erupts.

LOVING

To take her mind off Egypt, Alex whisks Ava out of state to a romantic inn. Shortly afterward, Ava is arrested for violating police orders by crossing the state line. While Gwyn and Jeremy spend time together at the hospital following her hysterectomy, Clay finds himself thinking of Gwyn even while he wines and dines Steffi. Upset at finding Leonard alone with Stacey, Buck assures Leonard that he will pay his debt immediately. After Ava's arrest, Buck confesses to the role he played in Egypt's disappearance but the police plan to indict Ava for murder unless Egypt turns up. Buck comes clean with Stacey about Egypt's blackmail scheme and returns the money he stole from the bar to pay Leonard. Stacey admits to Buck that she still loves him but cannot forgive him for putting her family in danger. Gwyn checks out of the hospital and, against Jeremy's wishes, attends the ad agency's party. Casey returns home from the party to find Tyler has ruined his expensive camera. Joseph plays on Curtis' insecurities about Dinah Lee. Buck lies to Egypt to lure her back to town by telling her Ava and Alex plan to escape with Alexis.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE

Hank, having learned of Dorian's initial plans to jump bail, arranges for a hearing. When Dorian informs Judge Fitzwater that no lawyer in town will take her case, the judge appoints a public defender. Thanks to Blair's bribing a court clerk, Nora is the lawyer assigned to the case. Nora argues strongly against taking Dorian's case but she knows that by defying the judge's order, she could be prevented from practicing law. Max continues to lie to Luna about his whereabouts and spends time gambling at the casino with Blair. Cassie and Andrew decide to try and have another baby. Alex assures Asa that she will not make love again until they are engaged. She bets her half of the casino that he will marry her by April 1. Emily becomes jealous when Rebecca dances with Powell. Powell punches out a fellow student who taunts Rebecca. Viki suggests that she and Jessica visit Joey in Italy. Ethel Crawford tells Hank and Bo that she saw Dorian suffocate Victor and provides the name of another witness. Dorian and Nora squabble as they work on Dorian's case. Todd makes a confession at church. Powell writes another poem which is also published in the school paper.

BOLD AND BEAUTIFUL

Macy studies her divorce papers and tells Connor she does not want her marriage to end because she believes marriage should be forever. Big Bear Cabin has been heavily damaged by the earthquake and Taylor is buried beneath some rubble. After freeing herself, she finds James pinned under a fallen beam. Sally tells Anthony that she is nothing but an old fool with an overactive imagination. Taylor wraps James' knee. James thinks their only chance for survival is to find help or else they will freeze to death if they stay in the cabin because all the windows are broken and the snow is coming in. Taylor helps James to his feet but his leg is too badly injured for him to walk. James then tells Taylor that she will have to go for help on her own. Ridge tells Stephanie and Jack that he has checked the hospitals and called the police but they cannot investigate until Taylor has been missing 48 hours. Ridge wonders if there is a chance she went up to the Big Bear Cabin. Taylor asks James if there is anything in his life that he has left undone. James admits he wishes he could have had an intimate relationship with a woman. Suddenly there is a very strong aftershock and Taylor is certain they are going to die. James assures Taylor that they are not going to die and their fear leads to a passionate kiss.

ALL MY CHILDREN

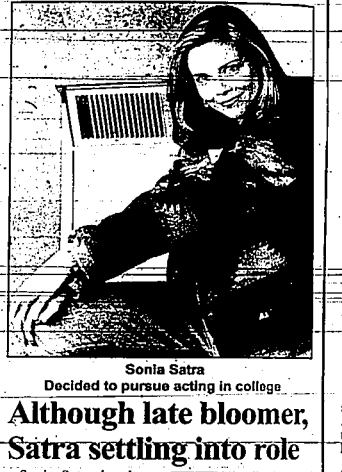

Mona procures a kitchen knife from Erica's house and confronts Richard Fields saying she has to kill him. Livia and Jack congratulate Erica on her testimony, but Erica can only think of Dimitri. When Erica arrives at Linden she learns about Fields' attempt to molest Bianca, and Joe reports Mona and the knife missing. Mona realizes she cannot stab Fields, but when he suffers a coronary, she taunts him and leaves, believing he is faking again. Anton finds a shaken Kendall on his doorstep. Kendall tells Anton of Fields' near-attack on Bianca, and begs for a chance to prove she can change. Kendall also admits to Anton that she lied about the events of the day of the stabbing. When Dimitri arrives and learns about the Fields/Bianca encounter, he goes to the Pine Cone and allows Fields to die without calling for help. Erica confronts Bianca as Kendall makes plans to leave town rather than face perjury charges. Gloria vows to win back Adam's love and Dimitri offers to let her stay at the hunting lodge. Dixie encourages the unyielding Adam to forgive Gloria then blasts him for his hypocrisy. The jealous Julia ruins Terrence's toast to Maria and Edmund at the rehearsal dinner. Later, an angry Terrence finds Taylor alluring. Maria opens her door to Brooke the eve before her wedding and is shocked by what she is told.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES

After assuring Caroline that he never wants to see Marlena again, Roman is furious when he arrives home to find Marlena there. Marlena thinks there may be hope for them yet until Roman asks her to leave. Kristen is thrilled when she learns Tony has purchased the mansion for them to live in. Kate is heartbroken when Lucas ignores her pleas and sticks with his confession that he murdered Curtis Brown. As Lucas is arrested the judge declares a mistrial, but it is possible the district attorney may decide to try Billie again. Carrie's surprise birthday party turns into a celebration for Billie. The Hortons are shocked when Bill arrives at the party and shares a touching reunion with his wife. Marlena is devastated when Roman tells her at the party that he is filing for divorce. John walks home through the park and meets a homeless man named Gabriel who listens to John's troubles then tells John everything will work out in the end. Later, John finds out that no one in the area knows a homeless man going under the name Gabriel.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS

Nicholas asks Nikki if they will do anything special for Victor's birthday and Nikki changes the subject. Victoria asks Nikki if she is bothered by the fact that she and Cole are still very close. Victoria then tells Nikki to stop playing innocent. Jack reminds Nikki of the danger in getting involved with the man her daughter still loves. Hope and Victor discuss the fact that Cole now knows why Victor opened Eve's grave. Hope asks how Victor plans to deal with his pain regardless of the results of the tests to determine whether or not he is Cole's father. After Jack and Marilyn exchange sarcastic jabs, he gives her his phone number. Kay tells Rex that Nikki called and wants to see her. Rex tells Kay that she cannot be a psychiatrist for all of Genoa City. Nikki asks why Victor cannot leave things alone since Victoria is starting to accept life without Cole. Victor does not understand Nikki's reaction.

Sonia Satra

Soap studs
John N. Goudas

Sonia Satra has been playing Lucy Cooper on "The Guiding Light" for about six months and she says she feels as if she is finally settling into the role.

"I love playing Lucy, but you have to work so fast in soaps and you don't always feel that you have a handle on the character. Another thing is the open-ended storyline, which means you are never sure what direction your character is going to take in the future. Soaps are quite different from working in a TV movie (Sonia had a leading role in "Bonanza: The Next Generation")."

Unlike some actresses who know they want to act from the time they are very young, Sonia did not focus on her current profession until she was in college. Although she had done some plays in high school and was told she had acting talent by her teachers, Sonia never focused on it as a possible career.

One day she decided to try and get a modeling job in order to pay for the extras at college. She actually went to the wrong place and the modeling agency turned out to be a TV commercial agency.

"They asked me to read for a pizza commercial and I got it. It all happened so fast and so easily that I chalked it up to beginner's luck. Acting suddenly appealed to me and I no longer had any trepidations about trying it. I went on more commercial auditions and got many of them. I guess I was the perfect type for those fast-food commercials which require a high-energy approach."

After successfully doing commercials and studying acting, Sonia started to land jobs in TV and decided to move from New York to Los Angeles, where she is starting making her mark in TV while also working in theatre projects. She actually auditioned for a part on "Guiding Light" during this time but did not get it. She feels her current role as Lucy is a mild form of vindication for losing that other role to another actress.

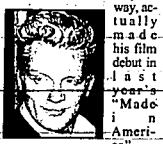

"At the beginning, you realize how much you don't know when you do a soap and you have to keep your eyes and ears open. There's much more to it than learning your lines and getting into your character. I was lucky that I was hired on a soap such as 'Guiding Light' because the people are very helpful and nice. The cast is terrific and I'm learning more every day."

Celebrity gossip

Q: Isn't it true that Anjelica Huston is still bitter about the breakup of her longtime romance with Jack Nicholson? — H.M.

A: The aborted love affair you refer to is, by Hollywood standards, ancient history. Anjelica is now happily married to artist-sculptor Robert Graham. Yes, it's true Huston took it hard when her romance with Nicholson took a wrong turn four years ago when he was making "The Two Jakes." That's when Jack furtively took up with former waitress-turned-actress Rebecca Broussard. When she found out, Anjelica slapped the actor in his dressing room. something he says he deserved. But that was then. Now he is set to star in a new flick, "The Crossing Guard," directed by Sean Penn. Guess who's being sought as Jack's co-star — Anjelica herself. She likes the idea, but we have yet to hear from Nicholson.

Q: What a film debut Will Smith made in "Six Degrees of Separation." How did he take to the scene in which he kissed Anthony Michael Hall? — L.A.

Hall

A: Smith — who, by the way, actually made his film debut in last year's "Made in America" — had a problem with that scene. According to Hall, Smith refused to actually kiss him. The filmmakers tried to cover Hall's lips with a makeup sponge, but they couldn't pull that off. Instead, the camera angle was able to provide the effect of them kissing while not actually doing the smooch.

Q: Can you tell us what all the fuss was about last year in the celebrated dispute between aging actresses Elke Sommer and Zsa Zsa Gabor? — H.J.

A: The Los Angeles Times recently noted that the Gabor-Sommer brouhaha was one of 1993's most entertaining events in Hollywood. It started when Zsa Zsa cracked that Elke, 52, a former screen sex goddess, was a bald-headed Hollywood has-been who hangs out in seedy bars and sells hand-knitted sweaters to make a living. Sommer sued, declaring that, among other things, Zsa Zsa — who turns 77 this year — has a fat butt. The jury sided with Sommer, who won a $3.2 million judgment.

Q. Can you tell us something about Faith Hill, that gorgeous young country singer who is so popular these days? — V.H.

A. The 25-year-old singer

is certainly one of country's up-and-coming superstars. Her first single, "Wild One," received a huge response, and ditto for her debut album, "Take Me as I Am," which blends gospel with country. Faith, who has been singing most of her life, was a member of the Star Baptist Church choir. At 5 feet 8 inches tall, she played basketball and ran track in high school, and was a cheerleader as well. When she was 19, she moved to Nashville. Take it on faith: Keep an eye on this country star in the making.

Q. Isn't it true that Tori Spelling, the TV star and daughter of fabulously wealthy Hollywood parents, has so many clothes and shoes that she needs a conveyor belt at home to store all the stuff? — H.S.

A. No question that the huge home owned by Aaron and Candy Spelling — he is the producer of "Beverly Hills 90210" — could well accommodate several walk-in closets, not to mention conveyor belts, for daughter Tori's wardrobe. The word was circulating in Hollywood recently that the young actress did indeed have hundreds of pairs of shoes neatly arranged on a conveyor belt. It ain't so, Tori tells me. "Someone made that up," she says. She admits to one walk-in closet, but she maintains she's not a clothes horse. Tori adds that she doesn't especially like to shop and wears jeans most of the time — and sometimes even used clothing. Still in all, she insists on always looking stylish.

Q. Do you think the success of "What's Love Got to Do With It" will finally pave the way for a film biography of the legendary Jimi Hendrix? — I.L.

A. You can count on it. "What's Love" star Laurence Fishburne, who is a prime contender for an Academy Award nomination for his portrayal of Ike Turner in the film, will produce and star in the Hendrix biography, "'Scuse Me While I Kiss the Sky." The film should shed some new light on the circumstances of the rock legend's 1970 death, long attributed to a drug overdose.

Q. Tell us, does Kirk Douglas really write those best sellers or is there a ghostwriter hidden away somewhere? — F.O.

A. Douglas himself has written those three successful books. As a matter of fact, he takes off every Monday by helicopter to a private hideaway and works there, returning on Friday. The schedule works, but I hear his wife Anne isn't at all happy with it.

Q. Am I crazy or did I spot a wedding band on Julia Roberts' finger during some scenes in her new movie "The Pelican Brief"? I was under the impression that her screen character was supposed to be single. — N.C.

A. Since her movie character wasn't married, I assume the ring appeared after Roberts married Lyle Lovett during the filming of the movie. Usually, when an actress feels strongly about leaving her wedding ring on her hand during shooting, she's accommodated by being fitted with a flesh-colored covering so the ring won't photograph. In this case, the mystery of the ring may be deliberate on the part of the production team to celebrate the new bride, or maybe it was an oversight.

Q: What's this about Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, who'll play the title character in the upcoming "Scarlett" sequel to "Gone With the Wind," getting herself involved in a difficult marriage with another actor. Who is her husband, and what's the problem? — M.S.

A: Joanne, a British ac-

Joanne Whalley-Kilmer

tress, met her husband six years ago on the set of the movie "Willow." He is 34-year-old actor Val Kilmer, who can be seen in the current flick "Tombstone." Their six-year marriage is good shape; the couple has a 2-year-old daughter, Mercedes. Like most show biz marriages, there are some peculiar stresses. One was a false report three years ago that the couple was breaking up. Kilmer described the incident as "awful" because the couple had to repeatedly deny a separation was in the offing.

Q. Doesn't Michael J. Fox go to weird lengths to avoid being spotted in public, which he hates? Does this mean he wears dark shades and fake moustaches? — K.G.

A. Nothing quite so obvious. However, Michael does wear a baseball cap pulled down over his forehead when in crowds or groups. Fellow residents in his Manhattan apartment building note wryly that he does this hat trick even in the elevator when there are ladies present, a habit they find ungentlemanly. One tenant told me, "We have quite a bunch of celebrities living here, and some are even more famous and recognizable than Michael — and they don't wear hats in the elevator."
